Death of Prof. Cutler, at Harvard University—Brief Sketch of his Career.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 27.—Many of the readers of the TIMES will learn with deep regret that RUFUS JEFFERSON CUTLER, Professor of Modern Languages in Harvard University, died this morning. He had been confined to his room about nine weeks with an affection of the spine, but as he had been subject to similar attacks for a number of years, no serious consequences were apprehended. A few days ago, however, a malignant form of erysipelas made its appearance, and as he was much weakened by confinement and disease, it soon resulted in death. Prof. CUTLER was a native of Hollliston, in this State, and was graduated at Harvard College in 1833. He taught school for several years after leaving college, and was also connected with the New-York Evening Post and the New-York Tribune in some editorial capacity for a short time. In 1835 he received an appointment as Assistant Professor of Modern Languages at Harvard University, but at the time of his death he had received a full Professorship. In the first course of University lectures Prof. CUTLER gave a series on GOETHE, and the principles of criticism, and had he lived, he would have continued them in the course for the coming year. He published a small volume of war poems a few years ago, which were very warmly received, both by the Press and the public, and a poem called "Stella" was also published separately, not long since. He possessed a fine critical faculty, and although he wrote comparatively little for one who wrote so well, his contributions to the Daily Advertiser and the North American Review would make a very respectable volume. For some time he had written many of the book-notes in the quarterly just named. He was a classmate of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, A. G. BROWNE, Jr., the reporter of the Supreme Court; CHAS. W. ELIOT, President of Harvard University; J. M. PEIRCE, Professor of Mathematics at Harvard University, and PELHAM WILLIAMS, Rector of the Church of the Messiah in this city. The funeral services will be held, on Thursday, at 11 o'clock A. M., at the house of President ELIOT, in Cambridge. OAKHAM.

The difficulty seemed to be settled, however, and the three started for home, the boys in a wagon and the negro on a mule; but they had got but a short distance out of town when the negro rode up to the wagon and shot the eldest boy, GANS CLAYTON, in the face, mortally wounding him. The younger succeeded in driving off, gave the alarm, and on Thursday the negro was arrested. Capt. SALYEAR, of the steam-ship Louisa Moore, from Newbern, N. C., which arrived here yesterday, reports that the steam-ship Fairbanks, Capt. HOWE, from Wilmington, N. C., for New-York, with cotton and turpentine to J. LORILLARD, was forced on the 18th inst. to put into Hatteras Inlet for a harbor, it blowing a gale from the north. Everything appeared safe and sound at 1 o'clock, when the first mate, three seamen and an oiler went ashore to dig clams. About 3½ P. M. they saw smoke rising from under the pilot-house, and immediately put off for the steamer, where was found everything blazing in the forward hold. The Captain and all hands did their utmost to quell the fire, but it caused on them so rapidly that they barely had time to get some of their effects together and leave the steamer. In a short time nothing of the vessel could be seen, as she was completely destroyed. The colored waiter-boy was brought on by the Louisa Moore. The Captain and crew left Hatteras in a schooner for New-York. Nothing is known of the origin of the fire, as the first seen of it was the smoke from under the pilot-house.

IN ROCHESTER.

Destruction of a Printing Office, Poole Building and Pentecost Brothers' Mills.

From the Rochester Democrat, Dec. 28.

Shortly after 12 o'clock a startling cry of fire was heard from the alley between the Democrat & Chronicle building and REYNOLD'S building. A moment after Box No. 12 on Water-street was struck. Fire was discovered in the fourth story of the Poole Building. The flames seemed at first insignificant. On passing to the job-room of our office considerable smoke was met, and the crackling of flames could be heard above. In an incredible short time the fire broke out from the southern side of the block and spreading rapidly threatened the whole with destruction. The Fire Department were promptly on the spot, but although they checked the conflagration in front of the building, the rear, which is inaccessible, being situated on the river, was enveloped in a sheet of flame. Down every window the raging element burst forth, and now the whole block, from the lowest story to the roof, was almost a sea of fire. The heat and fire could not be controlled, and soon, in spite of every exertion, the rear of the Pentecost Mills caught. The flames leaped across the narrow alley to the rear building of M. F. REYNOLDS & Co., and the struggle for the mastery between them and the firemen was desperate indeed, but water conquered, and the attention of the Chief Engineer and the Department was then turned to the front. Discovery burning in Buffalo-street, and the flouring mill of PENTECOST & BROS., adjoining on the east, into which the flames had penetrated.

By discreet management the huge streams of water were kept from the Democrat news, editorial and daily press rooms, and therefore but little damage was done to the interior of the building—none by fire.

At 4 o'clock we were enabled to put our compositors and editorial staff at work, and the issue of the Democrat is uninterrupted. The loss to the establishment is is impossible at the time of writing to estimate with any accuracy. The great loss is in the destruction of the presses, machinery and material in the job and press rooms of the Poole or stone building. The loss there will reach $40,000. The amounts of insurance can not now be stated.

The flames had by this time completely swept away the floors and beams in the Poole building, which was seven stories high. At last a fearful rumbling, crashing noise was heard, and in a few moments the east end wall of the building fell into the river. The tow, which had formed on the surface of the water, about three inches thick, was thrown from the bed of the river into Main-street. A large number of people had gathered on Main-street Bridge to witness the conflagration, and the great mass of stone falling into the water caused a scene seldom witnessed at a fire in this city.

When the north wall of the stone (Poole) building fell, the stones rebounded from the river bed, and several spectators standing on Main street Bridge were struck by them. "Crit" BLAKE, brother of ELIHU BLAKE, was struck in the back, and suffered probably the fracture of one or more ribs. He has also received internal injuries which may prove quite serious. He was taken to LANE & PAINE'S drug-store, where Drs. STODDARD and HOVEY attended him. Others who were struck by stones were not much injured.

The efforts of the firemen were exerted to the utmost. Streams were poured in through every window, and no exertion on their part was lacking to subdue the disastrous conflagration. The Protectives worked with a will and saved considerable property from the Pentecost Mills. Most of the loose articles were also taken from the editorial and news-rooms, and from the office of this establishment. It was by the best efforts of the Fire Department mainly that the Democrat & Chronicle building was saved from destruction. The fire-proof shutters, which protect the rear of this block, kept of the flames in a measure, but these alone could not have saved it. Nothing that men could do was wanting, but the fire that swept through the rear of the block defied, for a time all control. The Poole block was destroyed completely. A part of the walls on the east side fell down, and the whole was gutted from cellar to garret. The Pentecost Mills, which caught fire next, shared the same fate. The following are the occupants in the Poole Building:

M. Gerard, machinist; Hand & Scribner, machinists; James Steele, silversmith; Louis Ernst, for the storage of goods; Maltz, silversmith; Emerick, machinist; Royer, machinist; Democrat & Chronicle, job-room; L. C. Abrams, brush manufacturer; Little & Son, machinists. Portions of the fifth and sixth stories were occupied by Smith & Foot, grist-mill. The latter firm had $1,000 insurance on machinery, but nothing on stock.

The insurance cannot now be given, but many of the sufferers were without insurance.

PENTECOST & BROS. have no insurance on building, stock and machinery of $12,000. They had in store $3,000 worth of grain and flour. They valued their building and machinery at $25,000.

One of the most frightful scenes during the fire was the appearance of a man at the third-story window of the Poole Building calling for somebody to give him a ladder. The smoke, thick and heavy, was then rolling in volumes out of the window, and MAPETT stood in his shirt-sleeves calling for assistance. The situation of the man was at once appreciated; the Hook and Ladder at once brought a ladder and placed it against the window. He then said that his wife was in the building, and this announcement created a feeling of consternation in the crowd. Capt. SULLIVAN mounted the ladder, and, taking the woman in his arms, carried her to the ground in safety. Mr. MAPETT then left and followed, and it was a relief to the assemblage that life had not been lost.

IN POUGHKEEPSIE.

Particulars of Monday Night's Fires—Several Stores Burned—Alarming Frequency of Incendiary Fires—City Officials' Property Destroyed.

From Our Own Correspondent.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Monday, Dec. 26, 1870.

A Press telegram has already informed you of a destructive fire in this city last evening. It broke out about 8 o'clock in the drinking saloon of GEORGE W. CANNON, No. 301 Main-street. Its origin is at present unknown, but facts tend to show that it was the work of an incendiary. The entire inner part of the saloon was in a blaze in an instant almost, and an explosion took place, the flames shooting out of a window and almost lapping the building opposite. The fire spread rapidly, enveloping eleven stores on Main-street; then turning the corner, entered Garden-street, and destroyed several places of business there. The firemen worked heroically, but as there were not fire-engines enough, were unable to check the progress of the flames till thousands of dollars' worth of property was destroyed. The losses as near as they can be arrived at, are as follows:

Liberty Hyde, shoe-dealer, $2,000, fully insured; Archibald Wilson, bookstore, $7,000, fully insured; Morgan L. Farnum, drug-store, $15,000, insured for $10,000; E. Dunn, fancy store, $7,000, insured for $3,500; G. W. Cannon, $600, insured for $1,000; J. D. Meirose, fancy store, $2,000, insured for $1,000; C. S. Van Wyck, $1,600, fully insured; Philip Rosenbaum, loss on building $6,000, insured for $3,000; C. Gullman, loss on building $3,000, insured for $2,000; John S. Myers, photographer, $400, not insured; E. Spring, loss on building $3,000, insured for $1,600; M. Schwartz, clothier, loss $3,000, fully insured; F. Lampert, cigar store, loss $1,000, insured for $800; E. R. Pease, shoe-store, $3,500, no insurance; Mrs. Bates, loss on building, $5,000, insured $2,500; H. Kimball, engraver, $400, partially insured; H. Zeisner, $250, insured; S. L. Walker, $600, no insurance; Mrs. Pardee, $25,000 on buildings, partially insured; Wyatt, umbrella maker, $1,500, insured for $1,000.

Shortly after 11 P. M. another alarm was sounded, caused by the burning of a large outbuilding connected with the College Hill Hotel. In it were twenty-five or thirty tons of hay, all of which were destroyed; loss about $3,000, partially insured. It was the property of Mayor MONDAY. This last fire was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary. Incendiary fires are becoming alarmingly frequent in Poughkeepsie, and it is a singular fact that in nearly every instance the property of a city official is burned. Parker's Mills, destroyed a short time since, were in part the property of Alderman PARKER; then came Alderman UNDERWOOD'S store; next Ex-Alderman MURPHY'S residence, and now, last night, Mayor MONDAY'S property. Careful, deep-thinking men ponder over the above facts. Poughkeepsie today lain a great measure at the mercy of the fire element. We have not fire-engines enough, to begin with, especially steam fire-engines. We are placing too much reliance on hand power. Neither are our authorities washing a gang of shiftless loafers close enough; but, perhaps, they will now awaken to a sense of our perilous situation.

IN THIS VICINITY.

Extensive Fire in Jones Lane.

At 7½ o'clock, last evening, a fire occurred in the five-story brick building, Nos. 4 and 6 Jones-street, near Wall-street and South, occupied by WM. WALL'S SONS, manufacturers of cordage. The flames originated on the fourth floor and extended to the fifth, causing a loss of $12,000 to the stock, covered by the following insurances: Howard, of Baltimore, $5,000; American Exchange, $10,000; Standard, $5,000; Home, of New-Haven, $5,000; Guardian, $5,000; Maryland, of Baltimore, $5,000; Lennox, $5,000, and Jersey City, $5,000. The building is owned by M. F. ROGERS, and is damaged to the extent of $3,000; covered by insurance.

Fires and Loss of Life on Staten Island.

On Monday night, about 10 o'clock, a small house was burned with its only occupant, near the Princes Bay Station, on the line of the Staten Island Railroad. It is supposed that he set the place on fire, and then took his own life, as he had attempted it once before. His name was ISAAC MANCH. He was aged seventy-seven years, was an old resident of the place, and respectably connected. He had kept bachelor's hall for many years in the same house. He was at times partially deranged. When found his body was burned almost to a crisp.

The house of R. W. CLEMSON, the well-known breeder of blooded stock, near Clifton, Staten Island, was destroyed by fire on Saturday. The total loss is estimated at $25,000, which is covered by insurance in the following named companies: Eagle, New-York, $5,000; Knickerbocker, $5,000; Commercial, $4,750; Home, $4,750; Liverpool and London, $5,500; total, $24,000. The property formerly belonged to Mr. HEYE.

Fires in Brooklyn.

Shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday morning fire was discovered in the liquor-store of BERNARD LEVY, No. 9 Myrtle-avenue. On investigation it was found that some evil-disposed person had bored holes in the wooden partition separating the saloon from an adjoining hall-way, and after emptying a lot of kerosene oil through these apertures upon the floor, had set fire to the woodwork. The damage to the stock amounted to about $1,000, which was covered by insurance in the Fulton Company. The building was injured to an equal extent, but that also was insured. A few hours after this fire had been extinguished, another broke out in the boarding-house of Mrs. MCCOROON, at No. 34 Nassau-street, caused by the accidental ignition of a lace curtain by a gas-jet. The damage amounted to about $1,000. Insured. At 11 o'clock, still another fire occurred, caused this time by children playing with matches in a frame shanty, on Steuben-street, near Myrtle-avenue, the damage from which was about $500.

The Tribune has a special from St. Paul saying that a destructive fire occurred at Superior City, Wis., on Sunday, burning three of the principal stores, including the hardware establishment of R. G. CONDER, the Post-office, &c. Total loss, $35,000; insurance not known.

Destructive Fire in Canton, Penn.—Loss Over $50,000, with Little Insurance.

From the Elmira Advertiser, Dec. 27.

We are indebted to JAMES D. TYLER, of Canton, Penn., for the particulars of a very destructive fire which occurred in that village on Saturday morning last. It broke out about 2 o'clock in the millinery-store of Miss R. H. Thompson, and before it could be checked burned nearly every business place on the south side of Towanda-street. The following is a list of the losses, as ascertained by our correspondent, and will be found nearly correct:

J. A. Hooper, clothing, loss $1,000; insured for $3,000. Miss Thompson, milliner, loss $2,000; no insurance. Doty & Tuthill, dry goods and crockery, loss $15,000; insured for $5,000. J. B. Shakespeare, tailor, loss $300; no insurance. Strait, Clark & Co., bankers, loss small. Hickok, White and Co., dry goods, &c., loss $12,000; insurance $4,000. H. Tuttle, hotel, stables, &c., loss $10,000; insured $2,500. J. Kinney, jeweler, loss $500; no insurance. A. V. Traut & Son, grocers, loss $500; no insurance. H. N. Williams, lawyer, loss unknown. Dr. N. Smith, loss unknown. J. G. Scudder, dwelling, loss $2,000; no insurance. N. B. Peterson, barber, loss unknown.

The buildings destroyed were all wooden and burned very rapidly, and as the village is without a fire-engine, and not supplied with water sufficient to do much service in case of a large fire, the citizens were powerless to check the ravages of the conflagration.

The following is the Signal Service report of the state of the weather and wind last night, Tuesday, Dec. 27, at 11:35 o'clock:

Miscellaneous Telegrams.

GETTYSBURG, Dec. 27.—The lines of earthwork on the battle-field have now been fully identified and the Government engineers have left. The positions of the larger portion of them, however, would have been entirely lost but for Col. BACHELDER'S notes, taken immediately after the battle, by which he was able to point out their exact position.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 27.—In Newport early yesterday morning Mrs. AGATHA B. MAYER, who had shown symptoms of insanity, committed suicide by drowning.

CENTRAL AND SOUTH AMERICA.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMSHIP OCEAN QUEEN.

The steam-ship Ocean Queen, which left Aspinwall on Dec. 17, reached this port yesterday. By the courtesy of Purser W. A. SMITH, our correspondence, embodying the latest intelligence from Central and South America, was promptly delivered to us.

Isthmus of Panama.

From Our Special Correspondent.

ASPINWALL, (COLON,) ISTHMUS OF PANAMA, Saturday, Dec. 17, 1870.

I have received by the way of Buenaventura (the newly established mail route) advices from Bogota to the 20th ult. The weather at the capital was cold and rainy. Gen. HURLBUT, United States Minister resident, had left Bogota to spend a short season with his family in the country, where he expected to find a warmer and more genial climate.

UNITED STATES OF COLOMBIA.

I clip the following Colombian news from the Panama Star & Herald of the 8th inst.:

"By the Royal West India mail steamer Nova, which arrived at Aspinwall on the 4th inst., via Carthagena and Santa Martha, we have periodicals from Bogota to the 24th. The country continues in the enjoyment of peace and progress under the beneficial influence of the just and tolerant policy of President SALGAR—a policy which has commanded even the praises of the Conservatives. The Constituent Assembly of Cundinamarca, in its session of 12th of November, named Senor JUAN RAMMES Governor of the State, in place of Señor CORNELIO, MARIQUIN, who had resigned, and as Magistrates of the Court—Messrs. M. M. RAMIRES, F. DE P. BRUDA, P. SILVA, and GONZALEZ GAMBOA. The Legislative Assembly of the State of Boyaca, in the session of the 15th October, named as Senators Plenipotentiaries to the National Congress, for the period which begins on the 1st of April, 1871, the following, viz.: F. PAEZ, SANTOS ACOSTA, and P. CORTES, Holguin—and substitutes: 1st, M. HERRAS; 2d, J. REYES CAMACHO, and 3d, B. QUELLAR. The people of Santander have adopted Señor CARACANO MOJIMAN as their candidate for the next President of the Union. ....On the 24th of October last a serious insurrection took place in that part of the State of Santander, in front of Venezuela. It was caused by the overflowing of the Rivers Pamplonita, Tachira, Zulia and the rivulet of Isculia. The Pamplonita flooded the quarter of the Playa of the important City of San José de Cucuta. The water, which rose in some places more than a metre, flowed with such impetuosity as to overturn several houses, and damaged the walls of many. More than forty houses are inhabitable, from ruined walls and mud, which will take months to dry. A fine bridge, which cost fifty thousand dollars, has been also much injured. ....Among the news from the State of Tolima we find, among other things, that the manufacture of indigo, with the extraction and exportation of quina bark, go on increasing. The tobacco of this year, though smaller in quantity, is in good quality, and it is hoped that the disease, which in former years affected the plantations, will not be repeated again. ....The discovery of new mines continues. Many of silver have been discovered throughout the whole of the Central Cordilleras and the Tessellaria Mountains have different alloys; in some lead prevails; in others gold, accompanied with quartz. Mr. NELSON A. CHANDLER, an intelligent North American miner and member of mining companies in California, asserts that the specimens which he has obtained from some of these mines are very rich. This gentleman carries with him to the United States a ton of minerals obtained, with the intention of forming companies to work them. At the same time various persons have found mines of the same metal at distant points, so that it may be fairly deduced that the whole range of Cordilleras which divides Antioquia from the Cauca, has rich strata of silver, and which are prolonged from the Paramo of the Papas to the Eastern Cordilleras of this State. A mine of amber has also been found. ....With relation to the rumor of war with Ecuador, we remark in the commercial review which the Heraldo of Antioquia makes on the 4th of last month of the State; it says that the bonds of the State debt had fallen ten per cent., owing, it was supposed, to fears of war with Ecuador. The Progreso, of Cartagena, of the 27th ult., denies, in its publication, the official denial of any such probability. The insertion to that effect says:

"The Secretary of the Government of the State of Cauca communicated to the Secretary of the Interior that the Minister Plenipotentiary of the Department assures him, under date of Oct. 19, it at the notices about Ecuador intending to declare war against Colombia, are evidently falsehoods.—Official Diary, No. 3,060."

The Deputy to the Convention of this State for the Department of Panama, Mr. JULIAN SOSA, will introduce to the consideration of that body two very important bills; one requesting Congress to reform the constitution of the Union in such a manner as to permit the formation of a federal territory dedicated specially for the residence of the chief authorities of the nation, and the other ceding to the Republic the whole State of Panama for that purpose, as well as the Government and Administration thereof. The Assembly of the other States of Colombia have passed laws offering territory for the purpose, and Cundinamarca, we believe, offers Bogota for that object, on her part.

GEN. RYAN.

Gen. RYAN, of Cuban notoriety, is with us. He arrived out per Ocean Queen on the 13th, and I understand he is daily expecting the steamer Hornet to run in here, and receive a large number of recruits, arms and munitions of war, when she will be off for Cuba.

SHIP NEWS.

The ship Moloeka, Capt. HAWTHORNE, cleared for Key West Dec. 14. The schooner Narragansett, of Cleveland, Ohio, Capt. HASKELL, arrived at Aspinwall on the 3d, with coal to Pacific Mail Steam-ship Company, and cleared for Key West Dec. 16; all well. On the 15th inst., the bark Elliot Ritchie, of Boston, Capt. PUNG, arrived here, seventeen days from Baltimore, with coal to the Panama Railroad Company. The Elliot Ritchie was formerly the revenue cutter Harriet Lane, and is a rakish-looking craft.

Central America.

The Panama Railroad Company's steamship Costa Rica arrived off Panama on the morning of the 15th instant. I am indebted to the Panama Star & Herald for the following news brought down by said steamer:

GUATEMALA.

Our dates from this Republic are to the 26th ult. We learn that the newly-elected Chamber of Representatives was installed on the 23d ult., as provided for by the act of the Constitution of the Republic. The season of the rains had passed by and trade was better. Agriculturists were preparing to gather in the coffee harvest, as well as other products, which, we believe, turned out very well, though in some parts it had suffered from the heavy rains, which prevailed at the time of our former reports. The country was quiet, as were all the neighboring Republics in Central America.

SALVADOR.

From the Faro of Salvador of the 5th inst. we extract the following notices of a disturbance which took place in the City of Santa Ana. It seems there had existed an ancient rivalry between the inhabitants of some country huts at the foot of the volcano and those of the city of Santa Ana, caused by disputes about the limits of their lands. The excitement was so great that the former attacked the small garrison in the city, and committed outrages on two of the owners of the farm of Comecayo, and other persons not concerned in the affair. The Government, on being telegraphed to, sent troops, and disarmed the peace-breakers. The affair had nothing political in it. On being attacked the little garrison of eighteen men shut themselves up, but the office being set fire to, they came out and retreated to Texistepeque. The rioters also set fire to the house of Messrs. FRANCISCO and GREGORIO ARCIA, and assassinated them. These gentlemen were the owners of the disputed lands. They assassinated, also, Don AUGUSTIN ALDANA and Don R. PAZ, who tried to restrain their disorders. On the arrival of Gen. MARTINEZ, and taking possession of the city, the rebels implored to be forgiven, and said that they had no complaints against the Government. Mr. BILLINGS, who was in charge all the time of the telegraph, continued at his post, giving notice to the Government of what was going on, is praised for his conduct and coolness.

NICARAGUA.

From the Gaceta, of 3d inst., we learn that Congress was to open its sessions on the 1st of January. It was doubted if this really would take place, from the accustomed want of punctuality in Messieurs the Senators and Deputies. The Gaceta asks, why so much desire to be elected and so little to fulfill the obligations undertaken?.... Not having had effect the contract of 10th November, 1869, entered into between the Government and the Central American and California Steam Navigation Company, the President has declared free of duty the introduction of flour into the Republic. The Gaceta, in commenting on this decree, says that the Government had fulfilled its part of the contract with the Company, obliging the payment of the duty on all flour imported, in all vessels except the Prince Alfred, but the Company having failed to comply, Nicaragua could not be bound on her part any longer.... The coffee harvest had begun in the district of Nicaragua, and promised to be very satisfactory—with prices firm.... At the date of the 26th ult. indigo in Rivas had corresponded to the hopes of the agriculturists, and cocoa even still more so.... A machine for cleaning coffee had been imported from the United States, but had not yet been tried. It was expected to clean 250 quintals of dried coffee a day. The cereals are being cultivated in Leon, and sugar and cotton in Chinandega, with every prospect of success.

HONDURAS.

From this Republic there seems to be little news of general interest about the intercoastal railroad. The Gaceta of Nov. 19 says the engineer informs the Government that the first section has been concluded, so far as levelling goes. All the single bridges, except that of the Chameleon, were finished. Eleven miles had been laid, and two locomotives employed in the extension of the works. In the second section the engineers were busy tracing the line and putting up store and lodging-houses for the men.

COSTA RICA.

Our dates from Costa Rica are to the 7th inst. Although the country has many improvements to boast of, the Costa Ricense, of that State, insists on the Government taking means to secure a communication to the Atlantic as an essential element of progress, which ought not longer to be delayed.... The attention of the Government has been turned to the subject of encouraging the production of indigo.... A wish having been expressed by many good people in Costa Rica to bring into the country Sisters of Charity, objections have been made to the proposal, unless they some subject to the laws of the country. In Spain they were allowed to take care of the sick, and to be teachers, by royal mandate. But they always considered themselves subject to other only the voice of their own superiors, and no other laws that those established by them. The Gaceta Oficial, of Dec. 3, publishes the ratification of the contract made between the Panama Railroad Company and the Costa Rica Government, by which the former obliged itself to be against the number of its steamers on the Central American line to five. Three are to be destined for the monthly line, and four for the same if required for the exportation of coffee during the harvesting.... By a decree of 28th November last, the Costa Rica Government declines fifty thousand dollars, offered it as extending the cultivation of indigo in the Republic. The sum is conceded to agriculture of that article, in sums not exceeding $2,000 for one year at six per cent. per annum, giving to the committee of distribution the necessary securities for principal and interest. Forty-five hundred dollars loaned ten manzanas (ten thousand square yards) of land must be cultivated, and so on with other articles.

South America.

By the arrival of the Panama Steam Navigation Company's steam-ship Acapulco in the Bay of Panama, on the morning of the 4th inst., we are in possession of later dates from the South Coast, as published by the Panama Star & Herald.

PERU.

Under date of the 28th ult., we have received letters from our Lima correspondent, from which we learn that nothing of any special importance had occurred in Peru since our advices of the 22d ult. Congress was still very busily employed in matters of purely local interest, determining the limits of certain provinces, ordering the construction of bridges, wagon-roads, churches and schools throughout the interior, sending money to districts that had suffered heavy loss from fires and inundation. Enterprising deputies were making themselves prominent by disputing with the Minister of Finance, the most trivial items in the budget, which had protracted, thereby, the discussion of many matters of moment, and the Minister was successfully defending his opinions.... Railways and public works, the mania of the Government, still progress most rapidly and satisfactorily. Mr. THORNDIKE, the Chief Engineer of the Moliry's Railways in the South, reports that on the road from Mollendo to Arequipa, eighty-eight miles are ironed and traversed by the locomotives, while the remainder of the line is ready for the rails. The Puno line, from Arequipa to that city has six miles of embankment already waiting for rails, and from Puno to Cuzco, sixty miles of the projected route have been surveyed and mapped by the engineering party. In the central and northern districts, the state of the work is encouraging. The locomotive now runs on the Oroy line, nearly twenty-eight miles from Callao, and further, rapidly the Eten Road is progressing. In two months the railway connecting Ica with Pisco, will be open to traffic. So it will be seen, from these data, that our Peruvian neighbors are certainly progressing in their prosperous way with great success and determination.

CHILI.

By advices from Angol we learn that Gen. PINTO is actively realizing the idea which he has entertained ever since 1869, of peacefully suing for a satisfactory lying between the Biobio and the Malleco. As it is intended soon to sell the Government lands situated between the Biobio and the Malleco, it is necessary to insure colonists beforehand that their tranquillity will not be disturbed. When we reflect that Gen. PINTO's idea may become a reality, the important question of Arauco changes its aspect and promises results which will cause no loss of blood or treasure to the nation, and no discredit of our arms.... The United States Charge d'Affaires at Santiago has addressed a note to our Minister, stating that some one of the members of the Chamber of Deputies had stated that President GRANT had expressed himself in terms of ridicule respecting our war with Spain. The American Minister repels the assertion, and assures our Government that the President of the United States entertains no other sentiments for Chili than those of the highest esteem and respect.... The Council of State has resolved to promulgate the law passed by Congress granting certain concessions to the contractor of the Chilian, Concepcion and Talcahuano Railway. This body has also approved the bill presented by His Excellency the President ordering that plans be made out and an estimate formed for the construction of a branch line connecting the main line, between Chillan and Talcahuano, with the River Malleco.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE CONGRESSMAN'S CHRISTMAS DREAM, AND THE LOBBY MEMBER'S HAPPY NEW-YEAR. A Holiday Sketch. By A. OAKEY HALL. With Illustrations. New-York: SCRIBNER & CO. 1870-71.

This is a very pleasant and genial addition to the literature of the holidays. The story is not deficient in dramatic interest; but its chief merit consists in the power with which the leading characters are sketched. The old veteran of the Revolutionary War, Capt. Sherburne, is exceedingly well drawn, and the sorrows and vexatious brought upon his head by the "Circumlocution Office" of this country are powerfully described. The dream of the Congressman relates to the trials through which his country had passed, and bears only an incidental reference to the story, which deals largely with an episode between two young lovers. We shall not spoil the interest of so slight a work by narrating its plot, but rather recommend the reader to go to the book itself. We can promise that he may very agreeably spend an hour over it, and will probably close it with the wish that the Mayor would write more in the same vein. The story is embellished with several excellent engravings from drawings by Miss CARA D. HALL. These designs show evidence of no little originality and talent, and if Miss HALL could be tempted to place her gifts at the service of publishers, we might fairly congratulate the public on having found a new and most promising artist to minister to their amusement.

—The Phrenological Journal and Packard's Monthly. Edited and published by SAMUEL R. WELLS, No. 389 Broadway. The combination of these two serials, made not long ago, seems to have been highly successful. Each magazine has increased in interest, and Mr. WELLS shows great address and judgment in always providing something fresh and attractive for his readers—a task of some little difficulty in these days of hurry and confusion. In the pages of the Phrenological Journal much may be found worth reading, even by those who have never taken the trouble to inquire into the facts relating to the science. Mr. WELLS naturally treats his subject in the spirit of a true believer, and he has had many successes to warrant his faith and confidence. The Journal for next year will be the best source to which any one could go for information about phrenology, while Packard's Monthly will supply abundance of general reading.

Retirement of Gen. Pleasonton from the Thirty-Second District.

Gen. ALFRED PLEASONTON, recently appointed Commissioner of Internal Revenue, will retire, on Saturday next, from the office of Collector of Internal Revenue in the Thirty-second District, and will go to Washington, on Monday or Tuesday evening, to enter upon the duties of his new office. It is the custom for the retiring Collector to transfer all books and papers pertaining to his office to his chief deputy. At present, Col. CLIFFORD THOMSON holds that position, but previous to the retirement of Gen. PLEASONTON the Colonel will resign, and the present second deputy, Major WILLARD BULLARD, will assume the charge of the district on his chief's taking leave, and will, it is understood, appoint Col. THOMSON his chief deputy, and the business will be conducted as at present, and as it has been since Gen. PLEASONTON took control. Major BULLARD has been associated with Gen. PLEASONTON in the collection of revenue since that gentleman succeeded JOSHUA F. BAILEY, in the Fourth District, and subsequently in the Thirty-second District, at the time when Mr. BAILEY disappeared.

SINKING OF THE NICK WALL.

Full Particulars of the Disaster as Given by a Cabin Passenger—Fearful Loss of Life—Many the Survivors Were Hampton Gentlemen.

From the Memphis (Tenn.) Appeal, Dec. 22.

ON BOARD THE STEAMER SEMINOLE, BREAKFAST ON GRAND LAKE, Dec. 19—8 o'clock A. M.

After thanking all wise God for my safe delivery from a most horrible death, I will give you an account of a most terrible disaster that befel us to-night at 10 o'clock.

When I left Memphis I told SAM MAY and Mr. KORNICK that I did not like to go to Jefferson on the Nick Wall, as she was so heavily loaded. I did not think she would go through safe; but I had started to go on her, and concluded to risk the trip. She had on board about 800 tons of freight and about 180 passengers and crew, including ninety-six deck passengers. Well, we left Memphis on Saturday, about 5 P. M., after laying over there about twenty-four hours. The cause for the delay at Memphis was that the agent persuaded the Captain of the Nick Wall to wait and take on about sixty deck passengers. After leaving Memphis we traveled on without any accident, but whenever we would meet another boat, we would have to back water or stop running, so that the waves would not jar our boat too much. We continued our journey until we reached a point 18 miles above this place. About eight or us were sitting around the stove, amusing ourselves by talking and smoking when we felt a very severe shock. Of course we all jumped up, some running one way and some another. I ran out the front door of the cabin, leading to the boiler deck, but immediately after getting out on deck everything seemed quiet, and I turned around and walked back to the cabin. I suppose the time that elapsed from the time that I left the cabin until I returned was about two minutes. In the cabin I met Mrs. FOX, the Captain's wife. She asked me if anything had happened. I told her no, as I did not learn the cause of the shock, and supposed that we had merely rolled over a log; but I had no sooner uttered the word "no" to Mrs. FOX than I heard a crashing as if the heavens were falling in. I again made a dash for the boiler deck. Mrs. FOX was immediately behind me, but before I had made five steps, which brought me to the door of the cabin, the hurricane roof caved in, dashing barrels, wagons, plows, and numerous other articles which were stacked on the hurricane deck, to the boiler deck, which was jammed and rendered two boilers out of their staterooms. I was thrown against the smoke-stack on the starboard side, as she was then falling on her larboard side. I thought I would be suffocated by the smoke and steam coming up from the engine-room, but by great exertions I managed to extricate myself, and commenced climbing a bevel-roofed cabin, or wherever I could be there to catch a hold on. I was twice pulled back by the hair, and the third attempt I made some one caught me by the feet, and in the struggle to save themselves pulled my shoes off, which I lost. I finally managed to gain the hurricane deck, and when I saw such terrible scenes of escape, as the roof was by this time crowded, and every one seeking something on which to float. The best was by this time under water, nothing remaining out but the hurricane roof and the pilot-house. I cannot give you a description of the sight at that moment for my blood runs cold when I think of it. The wreck was still floating down the river, and we did not know what moment she would sink. Women were screaming for their husbands and children, and children for their parents; but then we saw God's divine mercy, for just then all hopes were lost, the past we saw lights of a boat coming up the river, and every one that could shouted for assistance. Mr. JAMES VANDEVOONERT, assistant pilot, lit a piece of paper in the pilot-house, and showed it as a signal of distress. In about fifteen minutes, the friendly boat Seminole came along side and made fast to the wreck, when staging was thrown out, and all that were able got on board the good boat Seminole, Capt. P. C. MONTGOMERY, bound for Watts River from New-Orleans. Everything was done by the Captain, crew and passengers that could be done, to relieve, save, or extricate the dead and wounded and have them well cared for. It has been raining very heavily all night and is very dark, and we are receiving all the attention that can be bestowed upon us under the circumstances by the crew and passengers of the Seminole. After the Seminole came along side of us, Mr. VANDEVOONERT, the assistant pilot, and RICHARD DILL, porter of the ill-fated steamer, cut through the hurricane roof and found Mrs. FOX, the Captain's wife, wedged in among a lot of barrels, boxes and other freight, and was brought into the cabin of the Seminole and after great exertions of rubbing and administering restoratives, she showed signs of life and is now, thank God, doing well. The dead are now being brought in, and such a scene beggars description. I believe there are about twenty-five killed, I cannot learn how many are wounded and drowned. The gentleman, Mr. TAYLOR, from some part of Missouri, who was rooming with me, is among the dead. His body has not as yet been recovered. He retired about five minutes before the accident happened. A gentleman with his wife, died in my arms. The poor fellow last two days married a few days, are among the dead. They intended to get off about one mile below here. I have lost everything that I had on board except what I have on. I shall continue on my journey on the first boat that passes, and will write to you from some point down the river.

MONTE HUTZLER.

The writer of the foregoing letter, who resides in St. Louis, intended to forward it from Vicksburg, but has delivered it here in person. He was slightly injured by being caught between the chimneys of the boat and the falling freight and rendered insensible for a time. He is now perfectly well, and will leave for St. Louis next week. The wreck of the Nick Wall lies aground about four miles below Worthton's Point, where she struck the snag.

LIVES LOST.

The number of lives lost by this accident cannot be accurately ascertained. Sixty or more deck passengers went on board at this place. Several of these, in the midst of the terrors of the scene, jumped overboard and were drowned. Many were taken out of the water by the Hibeats of the admirably managed steamer that came to the assistance of the Nick Wall. Passengers say that the Seminole, Capt. P. C. MONTGOMERY, came up to the wreck and touched it so lightly and gently that even not the slightest possibility of a shock, and then the life-boats almost immediately surrounded the Nick Wall. Capt. MONTGOMERY not only exhibited wonderful coolness and skill, but his kindness and generosity were boundless. His conduct as an officer and man deserves some more substantial recognition of his worth than this simple newspaper attestation of his virtues.

SCENES AT THE WRECK.

After every person was removed from the wrecked steamer, there were children weeping piteously because their parents were lost, and parents who sought in vain for their children. An aged Swede who had lost his wife, children, and all his worldly wealth, sat stupefied, helpless, incapable of speaking a word of English, and thus inaccessible to sympathy, in the cabin of the Seminole. To a German who spoke English he finally communicated the story of his griefs. Of the names or number of poor unfortunate people who crowded the deck and were lost, there is no record. It is only known that about sixty deck passengers were on board of this project. How many of the crew, consisting mainly of negroes, were drowned or killed, there is no mode of ascertaining, and it is not generally deemed desirable by those who are responsible for such terrible events to give the number of the dead. When the boat passed this city, one of the passengers came ashore and supplied a friend with money for a pottery and several billiard-tables, that constituted part of the enormous cargo. The application was refused because of the extraordinary quantity of freight heaped upon every portion of the steamer.

A MOTHER AND CHILD.

Among the deck passengers was an old lady, perhaps eighty years of age. The wan still living in fearful anguish, terribly burned from her breast to her feet, when our informant left the wreck. A nephew of Capt. FOX, the commander of the Nick Wall, while endeavoring to escape from beneath falling bales and boxes, was crushed, and fally fell into the river and was drowned. A bright, charming little girl, perhaps twelve years of age, was rescued from beneath a pile of rubbish, and when brought into the salon of the Seminole she and her mother met. Each supposed the other lost. The meeting, witnessed by the passenger, was strong, was touching to the last degree. The mother and child, locked in each other's arms and insane with delight, laughed and wept by turns. The little girl said, "It was frightful, mamma, down where I was, to hear the poor people groaning and dying so; and I was more nearly killed, because I thought you must be there, than by all the heavy boxes that fell upon me." There was not a witness of this meeting of an anxious mother and no less unselfish child, who did not weep.

FOREBODINGS OF DISASTER.

The disaster occurred about 10½ o'clock Sunday night. The sky was overcast with dense clouds, and the wind was blowing fiercely and heavy rain falling. At the moment the passengers were discussing the propriety of asking the Captain to lie to for the night. All were conscious of danger, and many refused to retire to their berths. The boat sank instantly, and was buoyed up by barrels and freight on board. She was towed by the Seminole to Baltimore Landing, where she remained till daylight, when she broke away from her moorings and drifted a mile or two down the river to a bar, where she now lies. Much of the freight, wagons, &c., on the roof has gone into the river, but much of the cargo will be saved in a damaged condition.

DEATH OF MR. TAYLOR.

Mr. TAYLOR, of Missouri, who owned the billiard tables of which we have spoken, was sitting with several others on the stove in the forward part of the cabin just before the boat struck the snag. He proposed to retire, when others objected, saying it would be "safer to sleep to-morrow." He had hardly taken of his coat in his state-room when the shock was felt which frightened all on board. When Mr. TAYLOR's body was taken from the wreck he had evidently made desperate efforts to escape from beneath the crushing weight that bore down the roof, and rested upon many an unfortunate passenger. When the cabin was thrown away it was then how desperate were the struggles he had made to escape. There were bruises on his head and shoulders, and he was torn from the clothes he wore, which were found in the pocket in the cabin. On his person there were found $1,300 in gold and a watch, now in possession of the clerk of the steamer Seminole.

THE SEMINOLE.

The scene in the cabin of the Seminole, when a score of bodies of the dead were placed on the cabin floor, and the anxious crowd was gathered on either side inspecting closely the features of those who lay stiff, stark and cold in death, each of the living fearing to find among the corpses the face of some friend or relative, mourned desolation. And yet, it the Seminole, like other steamers on that dark, tempestuous night, had stood still to await the coming day, few of those on board the Wall would have escaped death. The pilot of the Seminole, at some distance below, saw the lights in the pilot-house of the Wall swing, turned when she struck the snag, and soon saw the headlights of the crippled steamer moving downward as the boat careened. These incidents attracting attention, caused the Seminole to be steered directly toward the Wall. The wreck was reached just in time to save all who remained alive on board, and all who did not leap in terror into the water. The number of the lost cannot be ascertained. There were probably 150 deck passengers, thirty or more in the cabin, and as many deck hands. The whole number of lives lost is now supposed to be about eighty or one hundred.

GENEROUS DEEDS.

The steamer Pearl put off to the wreck of the Nick Wall about two hours after she was wrecked, and the Captain, officers and crew rendered the unfortunate people taken from the Wall every possible kindness. Them going down the river were taken by the Pearl to their destination without charge.

A SUCCESSION OF DISASTERS.

Murderers and thieves for some time past have suspended their diabolical operations in the city, and now it seems we are to have an epidemic of steam-boat disasters, which never occur singly. Every week or fortnight, the telegraph tells of the sinking of the R. E. Lee, and very certainly, if we may determine the future by the past course of events, there will occur a series of accidents or calamities on the Mississippi.

THANKS.

The names of those passengers and others saved are appended to the following paper:

"We, the undersigned, passengers and crew of the wrecked steamer Nick Wall, would cause respectfully tender our heartfelt thanks to Capt. PETER C. MONTGOMERY, and the officers and crew of the White River packet Seminole, for their noble and generous efforts to save the lives and effects of the passengers and crew of the Nick Wall, and their generous offer of clothing and everything in their power to alleviate our misfortunes, and sincerely hope that if ever any of the crew of the Seminole should meet with misfortune they may find as generous assistants.

STORIES BY TELEGRAPH.

A St. Louis dispatch of last night says that Mr. R. W. TAYLOR, the story of whose death is recited above, was of Jefferson, Texas, and not of Missouri, as stated by our informant. He was thirty-five years of age. A Vicksburg dispatch states that only nine cabin and thirty deck passengers were lost on the Nick Wall. The dispatch further states that Capt. FOX released his wife by cutting a hole through the cabin roof, and drawing her forth. She was, as stated above, seemingly lifeless when extricated from the wreck.

BILLIARDS.

The Great Game To-Night—Dion vs. Rudolphe, for $2,000.

Contrary to the expectation of many, CYRILLE DION and A. P. RUDOLPHE have at last agreed upon a stakeholder. At the outset RUDOLPHE named PHELAN & COLLENDER, after having been informed, through a personal interview with the second-named gentleman, that firm would hold stakes if other parties could not be agreed upon. DION agreed to accept PHELAN & COLLENDER. Afterward RUDOLPHE withdrew these names, and placed in nomination parties to whom DION would not consent. RUDOLPHE held out for three days for his second choice, and DION was as persistent in objecting. Meanwhile, the latter had named the following gentlemen: Messrs. Henry J. Cohen, Charles Ransome, Patrn Stevens, Frank Queen, Henry Feltz, John B. Davidson, John C. Heenan, John Morrissey, J. W. Collier, Neil Bryant, Lewis Baker, George Hill, Andrew Sheehan, John McCormack, John Chamberlain, Senators Norton and Genet, Aldermen Mitchell and Cuddy, and finally as the twentieth nominee, the proprietor of the Coleman House. Most of these gentlemen are widely known in sporting circles, and the responsibility of those not so known is unquestionable. RUDOLPHE would not accept either of them, however, and DION began to call off know." Capt. Patsy Connick George, the last named, was proved acceptable, and yesterday afternoon the players deposited their full stake ($1,000 a side) in his hands. Another difficulty remains to be overcome, and the players are to meet again this afternoon. A referee is to be selected. As many five persons had to be named before a final stakeholder could be agreed upon, it ought to require the nomination of at least ten times that number before a referee can be chosen; and there are not 250 persons in the entire country fully qualified for this important position. Necessarily omitting the names of upward of a half dozen gentlemen who are qualified, but will not act in any game in which RUDOLPHE is engaged, DION has prepared a long list of persons who may possibly be prevailed upon to serve, and it may be that RUDOLPHE has now in his mind's eye one of the gentlemen Dion has upon his list. This is about the only chance there is of securing a referee. A stakeholder may be tossed for; it would be folly to toss for a referee.

The game is to be 2,000 points up, on a 5½x11 four-pocket table. The excessive length of the same calls for an early start, and hence the proposed meeting this afternoon to choose a referee—an unusual proceeding. DION, conceded the odds of five per cent., will have to score 1,900 to RUDOLPHE's 2,000. Those who are marking the average should bear this in mind. The loser can usually make a better average than the winner, but only if the winner should count unless otherwise stipulated. Betting is about even, although, in exceptional instances, slight odds has been laid against DION, who has, nevertheless, the greatest number of adherents. Probably more money will change hands upon this match than has been lost and won at billiards since the only other match of 2,000 points—that between BERRETTER and PHELAN in 1869. Considerable money is out already on the average, which is being marked all the way from 24 to 30. Yesterday, in a pool, three experts marked as follows: 24½, 24¾ and 25½. As neither was aware of the other's marks, and as there had been no interchange of views upon the subject, the closeness is remarkable. One of those who tied marked 24 subsequently.

Gen. Ramsey and the Alleged Revenue Frauds.

Gen. RAMSEY, of Jersey City, who was recently arrested on a charge of using canceled revenue stamps, has written a long communication in explanation of the circumstances, and in defense of his assailed honesty. He states that he sold some tobacco last July to Messrs. SILKMAN and WINTON, of Scranton, Penn., and in the following month received a letter applying him that the tobacco had been seized by order of the United States Commissioner, on the ground that the stamps employed had been used before, but by giving $50 the affair might be amicably settled. The General asserts he did not answer this letter, and the result was that the Supervisor took possession of his store, and placed it in charge of a watchman for twenty-four hours. He declares that his regular business books had not been destroyed, as stated, nor has any person any part or portion of them. He denies having been indicted for selling tobacco with counterfeit stamps, but for selling it with canceled ones. The cause of the forfeiture of his bail he attributes to a mistake of Commissioner JACKSON, who stated him to appear, at the Court-House, both at Williamsport, Penn., and Trenton, N. J., although they were miles apart. His counsel at Washington, R. B. CARNAHAN, who was sued for his appearance, having failed to continue such responsibility. The statement that a large quantity of old stamps was found on the premises, he maintains to be imposed upon, as there was not more than $1 worth, which might be found in the store of many an extensive dealer. In conclusion, he declares his ability to prove his innocence of fraud when his trial comes on, in February next.

PROPOSED NEW MARKET.

Details of the Enterprise—Description of the Projected Building—Advantages of the New System.

During the last session of the Legislature a bill was passed, authorizing the establishment of markets in the City of New-York on a large scale, and granting chartered rights to a company for the purpose of carrying the provisions of the act into effect. The Company formed under this charter has, it is understood, fixed upon a site for the location of the first of these markets, and in addition agreed upon the plan for a building, the erection of which, it is said, will soon be begun. The general design of the proposed enterprise is given below, although the details are not yet perfected, nor have the plans themselves yet been submitted at the proper department, or building permits applied for. The location of the proposed market is at the foot of Thirty-fourth-street, on the North River, and the plot of ground comprises about five acres, bounded respectively by Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth streets, Eleventh and Twelfth avenues. This site has been chosen both from the fact that it is central and accessible as a retail stand, and in order to allow wholesale dealers to receive and ship supplies by water. The market building to be erected, will, when completed, be a mammoth establishment, having a front of 300 feet on Eleventh avenue, and a depth of 800 feet on the streets above named. The structure will be composed of brick and iron, the latter being used for fronts, trimmed with stone, and the dome of iron. In its exterior elevations it will be one story in height, and as far as possible in construction it will be fire-proof. The architectural projections of the building it is proposed to make attractive, and, in order to relieve the appearance of flatness, four towers will be erected, each corner, while in the centre a clock tower, 200 feet in height, will be raised. The four main entrances, one on each avenue—in addition to which there will be sixteen others—will also be so constructed as to present a handsome appearance. The interior of the building will furnish accommodations covering an area of 100,000 square feet, and divided into two stories. The ground floor will be devoted entirely to market uses, and provide facilities for carrying on business for 1,000 dealers. The wholesale department will be on the west side, nearer the River, and will comprise 600 stalls, varying in size, the largest being 10x20, and the smallest 11x10. The retail dealers will occupy the eastern section, divided into an equal number of stalls, each averaging about 10x8. The main passages or avenues through the building are to be 20 feet wide, and the others each 10 feet. It is further designed to locate four large restaurants, one at each of the grand entrances, in size each 60x12, while underneath the structure an ice-house 200x100 will be constructed, for the accommodation of marketmen. To the drainage of the building particular attention will be paid, while the ventilation will be of a comprehensive character. The entire building will be illuminated from the dome, where the burners are so arranged as to throw sufficient light into each stall. The second or gallery story, connected with the first floor by stairways, will be devoted to the offices of the Company, and for others carrying on business in the building. The entire structure, it is said, will cost $1,000,000. The advantages claimed for this market, and those similar to it, to be built in other sections of the City, are a large decrease in rents, taxes, fees, less expense generally to sellers in conducting business, while to buyers the benefit is great in increased comfort, cleanliness and system. The trustees of the Company under the auspices of which the new market is projected, are as follows: PAUL J. ARNOUX, Jr., Stephen H. Wright, Johnson, Treasurer; Cortlandt Palmer, J. F. de Peyster, W. D. Bowerman, J. G. Armour, Wm. M. Tweed, Jr., and Alexander Frear, Secretary.

Republican Inspectors Deserted of Their Rights—A Trick of the Tammany Leaders.

At the last election, there were two tickets run for inspectors of election in the Seventeenth Assembly District, (Twenty-second Ward.) From the Republican ticket, one person for each of the twenty election districts has been appointed by the Mayor as an inspector of election, and this appointment has been advertised in the Corporation newspapers. The next thing in the history of the transaction is that an employe of the Board of Health went to Alderman FLUNKETT, of the Twenty-second Ward, to obtain the notices for the parties to appear at the Bureau of Elections to be sworn in. The Alderman said he wanted four or five of the appointments for himself. Subsequently to this interview, one-half of the notices were left on the desk of an employe of the Health Board. Several of the inspectors not receiving their notices applied at different times to Alderman FLUNKETT for their notices, who informed them that the notices would not be served until Tuesday night or Wednesday morning, the 27th inst., at 7 o'clock. THE FALLEN FACTORY.

Continuation of the Investigation by Coroner Keenan.

Further Testimony of Experts—A Slight Difference of Opinion—No Verdict Yet.

Coroner KEENAN made some further progress, yesterday, in the examination of witnesses relative to the fall of the piano factory of Mr. JOSEPH B. HALE, in West Thirty-fifth-street, on the 15th inst., when four persons lost their lives. The examination-room attached to the Coroner's office was crowded to suffocation by those interested in the proceedings. The following evidence was elicited:

JOHN L. HAMILTON, of No. 325 West Twenty-seventh-street, testified: I am a carpenter, and I did the wood work on the fallen building in Thirty-fifth-street; I did it for the owner, Mr. HALE, under contract; the agreement was to put in 2x12 spruce timber for seven tiers, placed twelve inches from centre, carriage beams and trimmers, 4x12; the roof beams were 3x12, spaced twelve inches in from centre; the beams rested four inches on the walls; there were three rows of bridging and another strips to the front walls; side walls were secured by anchors furnished by the mason; they were placed in every eighth beam on both sides all the way up; the anchors were placed so as to come opposite each tier; there were 52 tiers of beams, including the gable; there were 23 on each front and 150 on each side, being placed in rows of 30 each; the roof was built pitching toward the centre, having a descent of three feet from each front; it was secured to beams by the wall; there was no iron fastening except the anchors which ran sidewise; planks were nailed to the beams, and boards were placed on top of the same and nailed; there was to be a guard roof on this, which would finish the roof; there were four openings for skylights, and two for scuttles; there are other ways of building roofs; there is no method of building roofs more securely fastened than the one in the fallen building; when I left the building at nine o'clock, on the 15th inst., I saw the roofer; there was no workman in the building that I was aware of; I did not feel the building tremble as I passed through; my attention was drawn to the walls; I heard nothing to indicate that there was danger of falling that morning; persons did ask me if there was not danger of its falling, but no builder ever spoke of its being dangerous; I returned to the building at half-past eleven Thursday morning, and found that it had fallen; in my opinion it was the wind that caused it to fall; it was the greatest force to the fallen side; I have built two factories for Mr. HALE before, and a third one under his directions; they were 100 feet long, and 38 feet 4 inches wide.

To the JURY—In the second story there were tiers with the building; the windows were built opposite each other, which would allow the wind to pass through; Mr. HALE superintended the work, and he was perfectly satisfied with the work, both carpenter and mason.

To Mr. FELLOWS—We took extra precautions on account of the building standing alone, and being long and high; I think the building was strong enough timbered as it was; I would not have put up a building like that myself; I considered it perfectly safe before it fell; there had not been a high wind before that morning; that I noticed, during the progress of the building; I suppose I have known the wind as strong as it was that morning; I felt it.

HARRY G. HARMONS, of No. 38 Wall-street, testified: I am an architect; I saw the building in Thirty-fifth-street; it was in the block between Third-Fourth and Thirty-fifth-streets at the time; Mr. MOORE, who was with me, said, "See, that building is falling;" I looked up and saw the walls falling in; the upper end and then fell in towards the centre; I cannot say; Thirty-fifth-street runs nearly standing; with Street or twenty feet attached; I have constructed several large buildings, such as the Wenker's Hospital and Bloomingdale's Asylum, and the Fulton Market; there was only one cause for the fall of the building, and that was the wind which was unusually strong that morning; in fact a fearful gale, going probably 60 miles an hour; I should judge; per hour; we could scarcely stand where we were; the building was very much exposed. I do not remember any such gale in New-York except one or two years before; I remember the gale; it was a very high wind; I consider the building a very strong one.

PAUL J. ARMOUR, of Westchester County, corroborated the evidence of the previous witness as to the fall; the walls started at the top, and fell in.

JOHN DAVIS, of No. 304 East Fifty-ninth-street, testified: I am a mason, and was foreman on the fallen building; the work was commenced about the middle of October; there was cleaning off the lot for a week and the mason work started about the 12th of October; I had eighteen or twenty men constantly at work; we worked every day, except in wet weather and Sundays, until the day before it fell; on that day we levelled up between the roof-beams; I was employed by Mr. COCHRAN; before we started the brick work Mr. COCHRAN said we must take extra precautions on account of the height, and told me to suggest that the lower stories should be made heavier than sixteen inches; I spoke to Mr. Hale about it; he said it was more than according to law, that he was going a certain height and would comply with the law; that was all that was said on the subject; I left the building the morning it fell about 9 o'clock; I was then coming down; I had been on the roof; I noticed no trembling.

To Mr. FELLOWS—About forty-five working days were employed in putting up the walls; I never knew any one else to put up a building like that; I left before we started the brick-work; I think the wind blew unusually strong that day; I heard of no damage to other buildings in the City that day; I think the wind raised the roof of the building; the walls were built according to a plan by the carpenter; Mr. HALE was there nearly every day; there were four men putting up at this time; no flooring had been laid; the greatest height we had to put up was about 30 feet; I frequently saw the Inspector of Buildings there.

FRANCIS BARRY, dealer in building materials, testified: I furnished part of the lime used in the fallen building; it was all used in the building; I furnished lime; I consider it the best in the market; the upper part of the walls were built with the lime; the mortar from this lime does not set as quickly as some others, but it is harder when it does set; I told the lime to Mr. COCHRAN.

THOMAS WHITE, of No. 409 West Forty-first-street, testified: I assisted in making the mortar used in the fallen building; I have made mortar four or five times before, and know good mortar when I see it; the sand and lime were both of good quality, and the proportion used was generally one cart-load of sand to one barrel of lime.

JOHN MULLIN, of No. 223 West Fortieth-street, testified: I am a mason and builder, and examined the ruins; from the appearance of the standing walls, I should consider it highly probable that the falling was the wind, and another the rapidity with which the walls were built; three to four months should have been allowed to put up a building of that size; I have built the Fulton Bank, the New-York Stock Exchange Bank, Young Men's Christian Association Building, St. Stephen's Church, and other large buildings.

To Mr. FELLOWS—MOORE & BRYANT built the WOOD BROTHERS' building; I think any building could be blown down by the wind; a property constructed building, placed in that position, might be blown down by the wind such as blew that day; the lime the mortar does not properly set in a short time; one wall fell outwardly, the others inward; there was nothing to withstand the force of the wind except a small house to the westward; the wind was the cause in a building placed alone then in other cases; I consider the brace spoken of by Mr. COCHRAN sufficient; I think if there had been a few months had been taken to build the walls the building would not have fallen. The open windows would lessen the pressure of the wind on the roof. The wind was blowing from a westerly direction; I think if the floors had been in the building would not have fallen.

JAMES L. MILLER, of No. 115 East Fifty-fifth-street, testified: I am now an architect; was previously a builder; I have examined the fallen building, in Thirty-fifth-street; I did not see it before it fell; I think the cause of its falling was the lifting of the roof by the force of the wind; the wind would lift the roof, and the weight would then carry it; I carry the other tiers of beams and walls with it; it was a very heavy roof, heavier than I ever saw before.

To Mr. FELLOWS—The walls were not as strong as if they had been built four-inch walls; they were, they could be safely built in that time if properly constructed; I think the walls of such buildings should be 4 inches; they might be safe at the present thickness, but any one would be frightened in constructing it; three braces; I have never built an exposed building like that one.

PATRICK MULLEMS, of No. 93 Baxter-street, testified: I am a plasterer and mason; the mortar used in the building; I have mixed mortar eight years and always used from lard; the mortar used in the building was as good as any I ever worked at; the lime was good; we had orders to send it back if not good; I never told Mr. FLYNN that it was made of marble; the lime was changed when the walls were up two stories; the last lime used was the best; I never heard that the walls were unsafe. I heard people around say that the building would not stand; I worked almost all the time it was building; we were particular with the work; I was sent to another building two days before it fell.

GREGORY FLYNN, recalled—When the building was about four stories high, I spoke to the previous witness about the lime he was using, as it looked black; he said it was made from marble, hence the color; the lime had an unusual appearance.

JOHN T. CONOVER, of No. 313 West Twenty-eighth-street, testified: I am a mason and builder; I examined the fallen building; I saw the front wall on Thirty-fifth-street, was standing four stories; from this and the other parts I could form an opinion as to the workmanship and materials; both were good; I think the wind caused the fall of the building; it properly constructed, the stories were low, and it was well timbered; an eight-story building, of a given height, would be stronger than a five-story one of the same height; I think extra precautions should have been taken, as it was exposed; two 3x4 braces were not sufficient; there would be no risk in put up a building of that size in ordinary weather; if the windows had been closed I don't think the building would have fallen; I would have put braces against the piers, independently of the window-braces; braces on the outside would have prevented the fall.

To a JURYMAN—I think the walls were built too rapidly for safety; if three months had been taken it would have been much safer.

LOUIS BERGER, of Brooklyn, testified: I am an architect and builder, and have examined the building that fell; as far as I could judge, the materials and workmanship were good; in my opinion the wind caused the disaster; if the walls had been properly set it would have had no effect; I think that if the windows had been closed that would have prevented the fall; it is not usual to close windows until the floors are laid and the roof on; if the floors had been in, the building would probably not have fallen.

To Mr. FELLOWS—I examined the mortar; it was good; I think the building could be safely constructed in forty-five days; I do.

JOHN DOWNEY, of No. 41 West Forty-fifth-street, testified: I am a carpenter and builder, and noticed the building a few days before it fell, and saw the walls were spinning; I attributed it to the rain; I think it fell from the force of the wind; under the circumstances in which the building was placed it would blow down if properly constructed; all buildings exposed in this way are liable to fall; there is no way in use to protect a building in that exposed position, except such as I understand were used in the case; if the floors had been laid they would have prevented the fall; floors are never laid until the roof is on, as they would be exposed to the rain and storm.

To Mr. FELLOWS—I expressed no opinion as to the safety of the building before it fell; there are as high buildings in the City; but with a less number of braces; additional stories make a building stronger; I think proper precautions were taken to prevent the fall; it is customary to put two braces to each window, as they go in to make them plumb; I don't know whether sufficient extra precautions were taken for its exposed condition; I think if the windows had been put in it would have fallen; the material and workmanship were good; the three by four braces were extra braces; I have never built an exposed building like that one.

PATRICK MULKEEN, of No. 93 Baxter-street, testified: I am a plasterer and mason;

MANTEUFFEL is pursuing the French in the north. Count BISMARCK is said to have demanded of Switzerland a more rigid observance of neutral obligations. The Proposed Annexation of Westchester Town.

The President of the New-York Printing Association and his political and business partners may have excellent reasons for extending the municipal Government of this City over a large part of Westchester County, and considerably more than half of its present population. Mr. CORNELIUS CONSON belongs to a class who never move in public matters without some strong reason, and this scheme of annexation is not likely to be an exception to the rule. It is a scheme pregnant with precious opportunities. California in its richest days never gave promise of rewards half so substantial as those that lie concealed beneath the provisions of Mr. CONSON's bill. Imagine the acquisition of the territory now comprised in the seven principal towns of Westchester, and say what limit can be placed to the plunder amid which our civic masters might riot. They have driven New-York to the verge of resistance to their authority. They have been slowly killing the goose that lays golden eggs, and they are now looking out for some unworked mine of wealth. Westchester affords their only hope. Annex a large portion of it, and for ten years at least they may revel in the results of fresh robberies. For a time there will be no end to their chances. There will be the chance of speculation in real estate, and of perfectly safe rascality in all forms of so-called improvements. The simplicity of the resident population will make them easy victims. They will be cheated without knowing it. Their property will be taxed almost out of existence before they begin to realize of what stuff our New-York rulers are made.

A conclusive objection to the projects is found in the fact that neither of the parties to the proposed compact has expressed the slightest desire for it. Surely, the citizens of New-York are entitled to be consulted before so enlarging the boundaries of their city and county; and the property-owners and residents of the seven most populous and wealthy towns in Westchester may as surely ask that they shall be consulted before they and their property are dragged into the City maelstrom. On neither side is there the slightest disinterested feeling favorable to the plan. New-York has evinced no desire to annex much or little of Westchester, and the seventy-five thousand people whom it is proposed to bring in have done nothing that indicates an anxiety to be annexed. Are they to be swallowed against their will? Are our citizens to be compelled to swallow them, whether the task be agreeable or not? In a free country it should be enough that the people immediately concerned have neither done nor said anything indicative of a wish for the annexation contemplated. This part of the United States, however, can hardly be said to be free. It is republican only in name. We live under an oligarchy, whose influence in a Democratic Legislature will probably enable them to cut Westchester County into slices, and dispose of them as they please.

The alarm manifested by those of the Westchester tax-payers who have been heard from upon the subject is perfectly natural. They look at this City and see the fate that awaits them if annexation be consummated. They put their hands upon their pockets and protest against the plundering which they dread as inevitable. What signifies their protest? When did a highwayman or a burglar desist in consequence of the entreaties of his victim? Do they really suppose that honest public considerations will carry conviction into the minds of the oligarchs of the Ring? If they labor under any such delusion, we pity them.

There is quite as much cause for alarm on the part of our citizens, who have so far withheld in silence the preparations that are going on to give effect to the scheme. This City has territory enough. Nature has defined its proper boundaries. The island of Manhattan comprehends an area sufficiently large to try to its utmost the machinery of the best municipal system ever organized, and to test the capacity of the ablest and best administrators our citizens have known. With a population considerably less than a million, and a very large part of the island destitute of the commonest improvements, we have one of the most wretched municipal organizations on earth. How we shall get on when an addition of fifty per cent is made to the population, and when the necessities of our growth shall carry them to the upper portion of the island, we can but guess. This, however, is already established beyond dispute: Our present civic rule is utterly inadequate for the City as it is. The lighting, the paving, the cleaning, the markets and the Police of the City are notoriously inferior. The means of transit from the lower to the upper part of the island are almost barbarous. With opportunities for making one of the most magnificent cities of the world, we have one which, in many respects, is inferior to a third-rate European town. With a semblance of self-government, we really have less of it than any English-speaking community under the sun. We, in turn, protest, then, against any plan that would enlarge the territory to be subject to our City Government. We need the improvement—the good, honest, economical government—of the City and County of New-York, as now defined. To tack on a huge slice off Westchester County would make matters worse than they are,—and they are quite bad enough already.

Majesty of the Law in Tennessee.

That portion of our country which embraces certain divisions of Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia and North Carolina, wherein the Alleghany ridge finds its Southern termination, is not, it may well be conceived, provided with the amusements which in more fortunate communities help to make life tolerable, if not attractive. Remote, unfriended, solitary, slow,—it is a region whose obscurity histrionic stars seldom brighten, and wherein the most enterprising showman ventures with less than angelic frequency. With the exception of an occasional much-needed revival, the casual lecturer or the traveling circus furnishes to the dwellers in this district almost their only scanty relaxation from the graver duties of whisky drinking and free fighting. And even these entertainments, since the development of a late strong propensity to shoot everybody connected with them, can hardly be expected to last very long. Under these circumstances it is not strange that an execution opens to the South-eastern Tennessean a vista of such delights as are scarcely conceivable by the blasé intellects of the town.

The hanging of one ANDY WILLIAMS appears to have afforded to the inhabitants of Chattanooga the material for a fête champêtre. As the prisoner was to be hanged at Harrison, about one hundred persons took passage with him on the boat, paying $1 50 for the round trip. The chief performer in the festival was then put on exhibition in a state-room, to which visitors were admitted one by one. "During the trip," we are told, "the prisoner conversed freely, answered questions, smoked cigars, and laughed freely." The rope, a small cotton one, being shown to him, to cheer him up apparently, "he doubted its strength, and hoped it would not break." The breaking of a table, however, on which several of his admirers were seated, amused him vastly, and "caused him to laugh heartily." With such edifying preparation, the boat reached the place of execution "just as the prisoner had lighted a fresh cigar." Here an additional force of sight-seers, "two hundred on horses and one hundred on foot," awaited their arrival. The cortège was quickly formed, and the prisoner, dressed in his shroud, placed in a wagon, and seated on a coffin, was driven to the scaffold, "followed by a large crowd, who to a stranger would have seemed all going to a Fair." All were merry, "a portion of them too merry." Liquid enlivenment was not wanting to the general hilarity. "Harrison's compound double-distilled chain-lightning being present in a number of bottles," and the conversation grew loose. Humorous felicitations were passed on the prospective decrease of the Democratic vote by the prisoner's taking off. One gentleman announced that he had come to see the show in spite of his wife's illness, and another, impatient at the stage-waits, "yapped out" his desire to have the culprit "strung up" at once. To add to the picturesqueness of the scene, "the day being somewhat chilly, several fires were built, and around each a crowd was discussing and warming."

The prisoner was placed on the drop, seated on a chair, and talked with bonnyclabs, actresses "that he had an hour longer to live." At this moment it appears to have occurred to this jocund malefactor that a clergyman was a necessary feature in the comedy. Happily, Tennessee customs permit divines to attend places of amusement, and one was speedily found among the spectators, perhaps "discussing and warming." In response to an inquiry from the Sheriff, Rev. HUBBARD CLARK came forward and took part in the following agreeable interlude: He "asked the prisoner if all was well, if his prospects beyond the skies were bright, and if he had experienced a change of mind." In response to these somewhat comprehensive interrogatories, "the prisoner replied that his road was clear, and that he was willing to leave this sinful world." Mr. CLARK thereupon sang the appropriate hymn, "And am I only born to die," in which the prisoner joined. At the prisoner's request the brother of the murdered man, Mr. H. DEUTSCH, ascended the scaffold, and the prisoner asked his forgiveness. "To this Mr. DEUTSCH replied," evasively and vaguely, "ANDY, I have done my duty toward my brother." Then, after an interview with a notorious courtesan, to whose care he confided his child, and to whom he gave good advice, and after being baptized, the culprit sang, "'Hark, from the tomb a doleful sound' alone, and original in its way." Finally—the audience relishing restless, perhaps—the performance came to an end, the white cap was put on—"at sight of which ANDY smiled"—the trap fell, and amid "idle talk, jokes and drunken wit," the soul of this murderer went "to its bright prospects beyond the skies." The body was put in a rough coffin, with the rope and knot, "to let the old man," according to a bystander, "know what death he died," and, there being no shovels, the earth of the grave "was tinked in and stamped like planting trees" and the spectators returned, contented and pleased, to their sick wives and their double-distilled chain-lightning in bottles.

The Sheriff who officiated on this festive occasion, it is instructive to know, had the pleasure of hanging the only other person ever "lawfully executed in the county." It is almost to be hoped, for the sake of his constituents, that his duties may be more onerous hereafter.

Toys as Instruments of Torture.

The custom of exchanging gifts at Christmas is one which few would care to see abolished. However trifling the present, the sentiment which it embodies imparts to it worth and beauty, and for the moment gives a brighter look to life. Such moments of unselfish pleasure are needed to keep some freshness in the heart, which the fierce struggle of life might otherwise altogether harden. For the little folks, especially, the season should be lavish of its good gifts. To them Christmas peculiarly belongs, for it commemorates the time when the Mightiest became even as a little child. Let the good St. Nicholas, therefore, for a time at least, rule the household, and fill every little stocking with wonderful treasures, and every little heart with joy.

In scarcely any other branch of industry has human ingenuity been so variously or so successfully exercised as in the manufacture of children's toys. Perhaps it has not always been directed wisely; it may be questioned whether the elaborate mechanical devices of the present give childhood as much genuine pleasure as the comparatively rude playthings of a simpler day. Childish pleasures, as well as childish pains, have their source in the imagination to a greater extent than superficial observers might be willing to believe. For this reason, a rag baby has often an attraction which the costliest fine-lady doll, dressed as well as her mistress, and often walking and talking much better, could never have. So, to a boy of any sensibility, a broomstick and a paper cap will furnish more of the elements of downright, hearty fun, than a whole roomful of Nuremberg complexities. Still, of simple and intricate, of cheap and dear, there is variety enough in the toy-shops to satisfy the most exacting spirit of babyhood. And this without making youthful amusement synonymous with such torment to the elders as may leave many of them willing to see Christmas blotted forever out of the calendar of festivals. Some ill-advised wretch, who is no doubt at this moment doing penance for his crime against humanity, once devised the fiendish notion of imitating musical instruments in the form of toys. Infancy naturally delights in noise, and so, ever since, these instruments of torture have held high place in childish estimation. The first object of boyish ambition, unless it be a pair of boots, is undoubtedly a drum, and after that perhaps a tin trumpet, or a toy bugle. In a large family all these and other similar instruments of torture, such as penny whistles, toy accordeons, euraopeans, harmonicans and the like may all be heard in full blast together. The effect of this wild orchestra on neighbors of weak nerves and sensitive ears, only HOGARTH's "Enraged Musician" could accurately realize. Constant repetitions of the scales on a rheumatic piano in the hands of a properly energetic schoolgirl, is a trial, but it cannot be compared to the effect of a drum or a key-bugle played with the innocent vigor of childhood.

There are other reprehensible playthings, in the shape of toy-guns and pistols, and bows and arrows, which are exceedingly useful in furnishing patients to the oculists, and whose presentation to very young marksmen we therefore deprecate as detrimental to the public health. But these furnish a minor grievance compared with the inclemable affliction we have referred to above, and which may easily become to persons of fine and sensitive organizations a very grave annoyance. We trust that Santa Claus, in filling his pack for the New Year, will exhaust all his other resources before rashly gratifying the crude musical aspirations of his little clients.

The Southern Democracy.

One of the Democratic organs in this City, exulting over the report that three-fourths of the members just elected to the Georgia Legislature are Democrats, declares that the fact "insures an impeachment" of Gov. BULLOCK. Of course, impeachment is regarded as equivalent to removal. The same line of action has been adopted in North Carolina, whose Legislature is now Democratic. Gov. HOLDEN has been impeached, and his conviction and expulsion from office are heralded as foregone conclusions.

We are not admirers of either HOLDEN or BULLOCK. The Republican defeat in North Carolina was due in a great degree to the odium fastened upon the party by the high-handed doings of the Governor. In his eagerness to make sure of victory, he really rendered success impossible. The Republican Party suffered from his harsh and impolitic methods of promoting its interests. In like manner the party in Georgia may attribute not a few of its reverses to internal jealousies and dissensions; and these, again, are in good part due to Gov. BULLOCK's unseemly and indiscreet attempts to manage the party with special reference to his own ends. Neither HOLDEN nor BULLOCK, then, has justified the confidence reposed in him. Both have done more harm than good to the party that elected them.

It does not follow, however, that the Democratic majority in either State will be justified in the adoption of extreme measures to hasten a vacancy in the Governor's quarters. A glance at the preliminary proceedings in the case of HOLDEN, and at the accusations preferred against him, suffices to discover the partisan animus which forms the foundation of the whole affair. We cannot doubt that the same remark will apply to the impeachment of BULLOCK, if he really be impeached. The purpose of the Democracy in Georgia, as in North Carolina, is, not to uphold the Constitution and law, but to rid themselves of an opponent who has incurred their special displeasure.

There is no justice or propriety in the proceeding, and assuredly there is no wisdom. The spirit it evinces—a spirit of bitter hostility to a Republican Executive, and of impatience under his administration—is not calculated to strengthen the movement for general amnesty, or to secure the admission to Congress of Senators and Representatives whose eligibility is not unchallengeable. With what grace can the North Carolina Legislature ask that VANCE, the Senator elect, shall be allowed to take a seat, despite his disabilities, while the Legislature itself exemplifies its partisan intolerance and proscriptive tendencies as against a Republican office-holder? As for the Georgia Democrats, they should one now have learned the virtue of moderation, and the profitableness of decency in political matters. The prolonged exclusion of the State from the privileges of the Union has been attributable solely to their obstinate and contemptuous disregard of law and equity. If they now urge a ruthless partisan war against the Governor, simply that he may be got out of the way before the expiration of his term, they will show how little they have learned from the lessons of the past.

The Mont Cenis Tunnel.

On Christmas afternoon, the workmen on the French and Italian sides of the Mont Cenis Tunnel had come so near each other as to exchange greetings through the barrier of rock that still divides them, and on the following day that barrier was itself removed. While Northern France is drenched with blood and echoes to the sound of hostile cannon, the peaceful task of boring a passage through the Alps, of establishing a perpetual and easy line of transit between two great nations, has been brought to a conclusion. NAPOLEON the First built the road across Mont Cenis; NAPOLEON the Third hoped to have completed the road through it. It is satisfactory to see that whatever may be the changes of dynasties or of international relations, this great work of engineering has gone steadily on, and that the world will soon enjoy the benefit of it.

The tunnel through Mont Cenis, as most of our readers know, is eight miles in length, without a shaft. Its cost is reckoned at about ten millions of dollars. The railway will plunge into the side of the mountain at Fourneau, some three miles from Modane, in the valley of the Arc, and will emerge in Italy, near a spot called Nardonnèche. The closest calculators have assigned the date of April, 1871, for the completion of the tunnel, and estimated that about six months more would be needed for opening the railway. This was founded on the expectation of excavating at about the rate of 110 metres—or, say, 360 feet, a month—reckoning the progress at both ends. But, partly owing to greater ease than was looked for in penetrating portions of the rock, and partly to improvements in the tools employed, the work has been more expeditiously executed. It is now probable, if no political complications prevent it, that the whole will be finished, and trains running, by July 1 of the coming year.

The Mont Cenis Tunnel having become, practically, an accomplished fact, a stimulus will doubtless be given to other and greater enterprises abroad of a similar character. Chief among these is the proposed tunnel under the British Channel. Several eminent engineers, both French and English, have expressed their confidence in the practicability of this scheme, among whom may be named Mr. WILLIAM LOW, Mr. HAWKSHAW, and M. THOMÉ DE GAMOND. In fact, preliminary borings on the two coasts, and surveys of the bed of the channel, have been in progress for some time. On the English shore boring was begun at St. Margaret's Bay, near the South Foreland, in 1866, and has been carried through the chalk and into the green sand to a depth of 540 feet below high water. In France a similar shaft, at a point three miles westward of Calais, has been carried down 330 feet. The result of all that has been done goes to show that the tunnel can be safely carried through what is termed the lower gray chalk; that irruptions from the sea or land springs can be sufficiently guarded against; and that proper ventilation can be fully assured. These are the main difficulties that have been apprehended, and their removal renders the scheme entirely feasible. When once carried out, sea-sickness in crossing the boisterous channel may be forever avoided, while the cost of transportation between the two countries will be permanently reduced.

The engineering exploits which today are matters of course, appeared impossible a generation ago. We are now as sure of our East River Bridge as of our Pacific Railroads, and so great risk is run in predicting that tunnels under both the East and North Rivers will be built in a few years. The iron rails that already reach to the Pacific will be extended in no long period to Alaska itself, and a tunnel under Behring's Straits, connecting the oldest with the newest continent and forming part of an unbroken railroad from New-York to St. Petersburg, may be among the possibilities of the future.

MINOR TOPICS.

Since the official account of the sorties of Wednesday last, details are wanting of the further movements of the French troops, who then took up positions outside of Paris. These dispatches located a large body of the garrison at Neuilly-sur-Marne and the contiguous points of Villa Evrard and Maison Blanche. Today's telegrams announce that the Prussians have commenced to bombard Fort Avron, a recently-constructed outwork situated on an eminence about a mile and a half nearer Paris than the positions referred to. The announcement made by "the commanding General of the Saxon troops" not only indicates, therefore, that the Germans have begun to make the siege something more than a passive investment, but shows, also, that at least one section of the garrison who made the last sortie have again retreated within the shelter of the forts. It is not improbable that this newly-opened bombardment is the first step in a general attack upon the semicircle of forts in front of Castle Vincennes. Before the siege had commenced, we expressed an opinion that, all things considered, the east was the most vulnerable side of Paris. It seems not unlikely that the besiegers have come to a similar conclusion.

"The Farragut Monument Association of the City of New York" is of that thoroughly representative character, whether considered professionally, politically or socially, which fitly accords with the national importance of the enterprise they have undertaken. If any men was qualified, both on account of his character and achievements, to elicit the admiration and gratitude of all loyal citizens of the Republic, it was "the great and good Admiral" who lately passed to his rest. In him the type of the founders of the Union was reproduced, and if marble or monumental bronze may better perpetuate his memory, there are but few of the community who will not readily give according to their means for such an object. The members of the Association have done wisely in limiting the sums subscribed to $100, and it would be an appropriate adjunct to this resolution were they to form a supplementary organization designed to reach the great mass of our artisan population, and so give the warmth of feeling with which the memory of Admiral FARRAGUT is regarded by them an opportunity of proper expression.

The sinking of six English vessels on the Seine by the Prussians, is precisely the sort of event calculated to complete the change in British sentiment with reference to the present war. Should the alleged outrage turn out to be of so wanton a character as has been represented, it may involve grave diplomatic complications whose results are likely to be out of all proportion to the event that called them forth. The country which spent some ten millions sterling in the deliverance of certain imprudent subjects from an oriental despot, cannot well stop short of war should Prussia decline to give the requisite satisfaction for the present wrong. Late indications have proved that the temper of the British people is not greatly different from that which prevailed in France at the outbreak of the war—its predominating sentiments being an irritating consciousness that their influence in Europe is on the wane, and a restless sort of determination to seize the first opportunity to recover their ancient prestige. On the other hand, in everything that relates to France the temper of Germany is of the most unyielding kind. Under conditions like these, it only needs that the details of the incident have been correctly reported to foreshadow serious trouble.

Every week affords fresh evidence that our jury system must either be revised or some heavier penalties be laid upon absentees from this vital obligation of citizenship. Mr. LORILLARD's remark that a five-hundred dollars' fine for default of ten days' service is a "pretty steep" way of reckoning, may, from one point of view, be quite just, but that gentleman, doubtless, thought the relief cheap even at that money. There are, however, men to whom time is, relatively speaking, of quite as much importance, who could not have so easily found the same means of escape. And the very fact that the duty has come to be considered a troublesome obligation, to be got rid of at almost any cost, proves either that the number of questions reserved for jury decision is unnecessarily large, or that the obligations of citizenship are but slightly valued in our community. In either case, and both causes have, probably, something to do with it, a remedy ought to be speedily applied.

Few Irish patriots have been so worthy of the lasting admiration of their fellow-countrymen as the man whose statue was yesterday uncovered in Dublin. WILLIAM SMITH O'BRIEN may have loved the cause of Irish freedom "not wisely, but too well," but he displayed at least an unselfishness and implicit devotion to the ruling idea of his life, which contemporary leaders of a long-suffering and generous people might not unprofitably imitate. The fame of SMITH O'BRIEN has survived failure, ridicule and exile. An aristocrat by birth and a Protestant by religion, he was, nevertheless, most emphatically a man of the people, and he loved the people too well to expose them to any enterprise in which he dared not risk his own safety. The tribute which a grateful populace paid him at Dublin, yesterday, was, therefore, at once fitting and well-deserved.

"The Republic will surely save France," said M. CRÉMIEUX to the National Guards at Bordeaux yesterday. However natural it may be for the members of the Provisional Government to persist in reiterating this assertion, it is tolerably obvious that the more thoroughly they pledge themselves to this task the more danger they incur of being displaced after its possible failure. Every week that this bitter and desperate contest is continued adds new dangers to the cause of popular liberty, since it impresses the more indelibly on the mind and heart of France the idea of retaliation and revenge. This feeling will, it is to be feared, be shortly powerful enough to outweigh all other considerations of national welfare, and to prepare the way for any Government, no matter what its character, that holds out a fair prospect of retrieving the lost honor and prestige of the past.

Perfectly justifiable as is the bill of indictment found by the Grand Jury yesterday against the Greenwich-street Elevated Railway, the public generally will be disposed to regret that so promising a scheme of up-town communication should have proved so total a failure. This is the more to be regretted that all the perils to life and limb, and the disastrous results to horse traffic, adverted to in the bill of indictment, appear to be of such a kind as could have been provided against by the exercise of proper foresight and the requisite engineering skill. Rapid means of up-town transit will shortly be felt as indispensable, but the fate of the West-side Patent Railway ought to be a warning to the Legislature on the one hand, to sanction no schemes whose practicability is not made perfectly apparent, and to projectors generally on the other to abstain from wasting their money upon crude experiments.

The reports of Prussian pillage at Blois and Orleans must be received with caution. The French have not hitherto been over scrupulous in giving a coloring to the acts of German soldiers, which was calculated to misrepresent their true character. If anything like pillage has been allowed, it is, unquestionably, a result of the stern Prussian policy of reprisals, and is strictly under the control of the military authorities. A policy like this is, of course, lamentable enough, and its wisdom in the present desperate temper of the French nation may fairly be questioned, but it differs very materially in its effects, both on victors and vanquished, from the unbridled license of an ill-regulated soldiery.

The Ice Question—Promise of a Rich Crop.

Viewed from the present standpoint, there is every reasonable prospect for a very large harvest of ice. Floating cakes of ice in considerable quantities are found along the Hudson River, about and for some distance below Poughkeepsie. Navigation, however, is uninterrupted as far as that point. All the Poughkeepsie and Newburg lines are running. The latter hope to continue, with the aid of ice steamers, throughout the Winter. Those at Poughkeepsie will scarcely be able to do so. The Troy steamer Connecticut has been plated with boiler iron forward of her wheel-houses, and Capt. DEMING—well known for his process in ice navigation—will continue to break his way through between Troy and the City. At present she is locked in the ice at Athens, but will make a dash for Catskill today. The steamer St. John, of the People's Line, has returned from where she grounded at Coeymans, and is now undergoing repairs at Jersey City. In the vicinity of Catskill, and from thence to Albany, the river is frozen over solidly, to the depth of two inches. This ice is of exceedingly fine quality, pure crystal, and of great strength. Persons were crossing at Catskill and Athens yesterday. The Connecticut cannot make much progress after two or three more freezing nights. The various ponds along the river banks are frozen to the depth of from four to six inches. Rockland Lake has a magnificent field of clear crystal ice four inches thick. If snow does not hinder, this will make the best quality of ice ever harvested. Highland Lake, at Highland Falls, has about five inches of ice, but not of so good a quality. The many ponds further up are frozen nicely, but none will be cut until at least ten or twelve inches in thickness is secured. Last year the quality of the Hudson ice crop did not compare to that of the present date, and four inches thickness was not frozen until March. With such an auspicious commencement, the prospect for an ample supply is very promising. It would require a very unusual and protracted thaw to undo the success of the present freezing thickness. All the ice-houses along the Hudson are empty, and have been for over a month. The supply in the market is now housed on board the barges, and by economical management will last until the new crop is received. At present the ponds in Massachusetts and Connecticut are frozen from seven to eight inches in depth. In Maine the new crop is already eleven inches in thickness, and is there in the market. Yesterday the ice in Catskill Creek was six inches thick. This morning all the employes of the various companies will prepare for active operations in the ice harvesting. The amount of this year's stock will probably increase very greatly over that of last year. All the old store-houses have been prepared to take in every pound of their capacity, and several new ones are either finished or in course of construction. It is estimated that the supply will reach 800,000 tons—300,000 more than that of previous years. The prices next Summer will therefore be proportionately lower. In view of the immense increase in the Hudson River crop, and the overplus from Eastern States, that must be the result.

How We Stand and How We Walk—Lecture by Prof. Wilder at the Academy of Music.

Prof. BURKE G. WILDER, of Cornell University, delivered the second of the series of lectures before the members of the American Institute, in the Academy of Music, last evening, his subject being, "How we Stand and how we Walk." The subject, he said, would seem a simple one. Any one can stand and walk, even the animals can move with ease and rapidity about the earth, yet to describe the operation was no easy matter. "Walking," says HOLMES, "is a continuous falling, and a continuous recovering,—a process most complex and dangerous." If any ten in the audience came forward and attempted to describe how they stand, and how they walk, each one would tell a different story, and no one, perhaps, could repeat his story twice. All know they have a soul, but, it is only owing to man's erect formation that, unlike beasts, he is permitted to gaze upward with ease. By means of figures drawn on the blackboard, the lecturer showed how, notwithstanding the curves of the neck and spine, true line of gravity is drawn straight from the base of the skull to the point of the spinal column, and thence in a direct line to the sole of the feet. It was entirely different in the structure of the ape and other animals, in which the head is supported at a point throwing the weight forward, and with a spinal curve without any angle at the base, as in man. He illustrated also how modern fashions among the ladies were imitations of the lower order of animals; as for instance the application of a large chignon to the back of the head which would cause the head to lean forward from its centre of gravity on the point of the spinal column. This involves the necessity of bending the hips backward, and the latter compels a bending of the knee and walking on tiptoe; the whole forming not a Grecian or any other, than simply a monkey bend. The structure of the bones of the foot was a perfect keystone arch. It was also found that when a man stood on one foot he was shorter than when he stood on two. This, he endeavored to illustrate by an assistant present, but while he admitted that the experiment, so far as his assistant was concerned, was a failure, he asserted the principle to be no less true. Man, also, was taller when standing still than when walking. This he illustrated by having his assistant walk, blindfolded, under a bar which had been previously brought down to touch exactly his head. Man was taller when talking in a full breath than when the air was expelled from his lungs, as

WASHINGTON.

The Coming Army Changes—Sailing of the Interoceanic Canal Expedition—Dissatisfied Clerks—The Congressional Contests—Sad Death of a Bride—Personal.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—The order assigning army officers to regiments will be withheld as long as possible to allow the Army Board, of which Gen. HANCOCK is President, to make its report. So many officers have got to be examined that the Board will work to the very last day allowed by law. It was impossible that this Board, which, by the way, the officers call the "Bensing Board," should perform its duty without causing more or less ill-feeling. Only a small number, probably about twenty, will be discharged, in accordance with the recommendation of the Board; but there will be in the vicinity of 150—the exact number cannot be ascertained till the order is issued,—remaining unassigned, who, according to law, will receive honorable discharges and a year's advance pay. A few have voluntarily resigned, preferring to make sure of honorable discharges by so doing, rather than run the risk they were conscious of incurring by submitting to the ordeal of the Board. But all alike receive the advance pay. The reports of the dissatisfaction are doubtless exaggerated so far as they relate to any active demonstrations, politically or otherwise. The dissatisfaction is no greater than was naturally expected. Not only are these officers unassigned disappointed, but those not sent to the particular regiment they desired to be with are put in a very unamiable mood. The Secretary of War has given untiring attention to the whole matter, and has endeavored to act with perfect impartiality, and it is believed that actual injustice has been done in very few cases, if any.

THE PROPOSED INTEROCEANIC CANAL.

The Tybee, under the command of Commander BEARDSLEE, is at Hampton Roads, and will shortly sail for the Isthmus of Darien, to complete the survey and exploration for an interoceanic canal. On her way she will touch at Minatitlan, the Gulf terminus of the Tehuantepec Railroad, to land the chief engineer of that road, and others of its officers, who are soon to begin its construction. The expedition organized for the survey of the Tehuantepec route, for a ship canal, consisting of the Kansas and Mayflower, which sailed from Hampton Roads Oct 14, has arrived at Minatitlan, the place of rendezvous.

DISSATISFIED CLERKS.

Considerable complaint is made by the clerks of the Interior Department because they are denied the privilege granted in the Treasury and other Departments, of leaving work at 12 o'clock during the week. The Assistant Secretary discredited the statement that the Treasury would close at noon, and said that on Saturday Secretary BOUTWELL professed to know nothing of such an order, and denied having issued it. Nevertheless, the Treasury Building was closed at noon, and passes had to be shown to obtain entrance after that hour.

SAD DEATH OF A BRIDE.

On the 9th of December Miss MAGGIE BECK, daughter of Congressman BECK of Kentucky, was married at Lexington, in that State, to Mr. JAMES CORCORAN, of this city. The marriage was attended with great ceremony, and the bridal pair reached this city on Thursday, the 15th inst., when symptoms of typhoid fever, noticed by some of her friends before her marriage, developed rapidly, and she was soon taken down with the disease. She died at 11½ o'clock this morning, just twenty days after the marriage. Mrs. CORCORAN as Miss BECK was well-known to a large circle of fashionable society, who will read the sad story of her death with painful interest.

THE CONGRESSIONAL CONTESTS.

Private advices by telegraph to-night from Georgia state that the Democrats have certainly elected five of the seven Congressmen. Gen. LOGAN's friends here are very sanguine that he will be the successful candidate in the Illinois Senatorial contest. The information received by them here to-night is to that effect, whereat they are considerably elated.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATIONS.

The Sub-Committee of the Commerce Committee on Rivers and Harbors are holding daily sessions and considering the estimates submitted by the Engineer Department. They will have their bill ready early in February, and will recommend appropriations to the amount of about $2,000,000.

SAN DOMINGO.

There is no difference between the San Domingo resolution which passed the Senate and the resolution on the same subject which is at present before the House Foreign Affairs Committee. The one provides for the appointment of three Commissioners, and the other for the appointment of five. There is not much probability that the Senate resolution can be taken out of its order on the calendar; so that if the House resolution shall be passed, Mr. SUMNER will have another opportunity to show how impracticable and ugly he can be when he has the mind.

PERSONAL.

Secretaries ROBESON and DELANO are expected to return to this city to-morrow, and Postmaster-General CRESWELL on Friday. The President's father, and Master ULYSSES, from Harvard College, are both spending the holidays at the White House.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

NEW-YEAR'S DAY AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

The announcement is authoritatively made that at 11 o'clock, on Monday, Jan. 2, the President will receive the members of the Cabinet and the Foreign Ministers. At 11½ o'clock A. M., the Judges of the Supreme Court of the United States, Senators and Representatives in Congress, the Judges of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and of the Court of Claims, will be received. At 12 o'clock the officers of the Army and Navy, and of the Marine Corps, will be received. At 12½ o'clock the heads of the several Departments will be received. At 12¾ o'clock, the Associated Soldiers of the War of 1812, and the members of the "Oldest Inhabitants'" Association, of the District of Columbia, will be received. The reception of citizens will commence at 1 o'clock, at which time the gates of the inclosure will be opened, and will terminate at 2 o'clock P. M. Carriages will approach the Executive Mansion by the eastern gate, and leave by the western gate.

THE JANUARY INTEREST.

Secretary BOUTWELL has authorized the payment from to-morrow of the January interest without rebate.

GEN. SCHENCK'S INSTRUCTIONS.

The Department of State has not yet prepared Minister SCHENCK's instructions on the Alabama claims, nor will they be prepared until Mr. SCHENCK returns to Washington. It is not yet officially known when the new Minister to England will take his departure, but private report says about the middle of January.

THE TURKISH MINISTER.

BLACQUE BEY, the Turkish Minister, is expected to return to Washington next Spring.

THE PRESIDENT'S RECEPTION.

The President received no visitors today, and will not be in his office for the reception of visitors during the holidays.

THE ALLEGED INDIAN FRAUDS.

A sub-committee of the Committee on Appropriations is now engaged in the preliminaries of a full investigation of alleged frauds in the purchase of Indian goods and supplies. Several witnesses have already been summoned.

The Mission to England—Gen. Schenck's Instructions—His Plans and the Question for his Seat in the House.

From the Dayton (Ohio) Journal.

A letter from Gen. SCHENCK to the editor of this Journal gives authentic information in regard to the powers with which he is intrusted as Minister to England. Explicit information on these points was requested, and the General has kindly furnished it. He is interested with the discussion of the Alabama claims, and all other questions which have been withdrawn from the London Mission. We had never supposed that Gen. SCHENCK would consent to appear at the English Court as a mere figure-head, or be satisfied with the empty dignity of the position. His letter confirms our opinion that all questions at issue between the Government of the United States and Great Britain are to be placed in his hands for discussion and negotiation, and that such an assurance was given with the tender of the Mission.

The General states that he will present his resignation as the Representative of the Third District, on the reassembling of Congress after the holidays, and expects to sail for England on the 15th or 19th of January, though this has not been so definitely settled as to justify him in engaging his passage for either of those days.

In regard to the contest, Gen. BUTLER will take charge of that in the absence of Gen. SCHENCK. This is a good arrangement. Gen. BUTLER, as one of the managers of the Soldiers' Home, will give faithful attention to the rights of the veterans there, and will see to it that the blunderings and unjust decisions of the Courts shall be thoroughly sifted. The veterans may safely trust the advocacy of their right to vote to the care of Gen. BUTLER.

In speaking of the English Mission, Gen. SCHENCK says that the present Secretary of Legation, Mr. MORAN, has been connected with the mission for some twelve or fourteen years, is perfectly familiar with all its details, and is a gentleman with whom he is well acquainted. Mr. MORAN will continue to occupy the position. This will serve as an answer to the applications which have been made for this important place. The General speaks of these applications as being "without number."

The statement made by Gen. SCHENCK in this letter, while they embrace some matters which have already been published, especially in regard to the desire of the Administration that he should take charge of all unsettled questions between the two Governments, afford reliable information in regard to the time of his resignation, the day on which he expects to sail, and the course to be taken by Gen. BUTLER in the contest to establish the right of the soldiers to vote at all elections. There can be no doubt, as we believe, that the House will decide the question of suffrage in favor of the veterans, and that Mr. CAMPBELL will not long occupy a seat in the next Congress.

It is expected that Congress will definitely settle the voting question by the passage of a joint resolution declaring that the United States claims no jurisdiction over the grounds occupied by the Home which inherits its right to vote with the exercise of the right of suffrage by the inmates of that institution. When it is considered that the Legislature of Ohio, in making a qualified cession of jurisdiction to the United States, expressly reserved the right of voting by its veterans, such a joint resolution would hardly seem to be required. But the Supreme Court of Ohio jumped this exercise of State authority, and thus denied the right of the State to make such a reservation. It was just as much a contract as that of agreeing to pay the principal and interest of our State bonds. The Legislature made the reservation, and the United States accepted the grant on the condition specified. The conclusion is that the soldiers will not be denied the right to vote.

It should be stated that the letter of Gen. SCHENCK was private, but as it was an answer to one addressed to him, there is no violation of confidence in stating his declarations in regard to matters in which the public are interested, and the publication of which he, if consulted, as we believe, would interpose no objection.

ORPHANS OF THE WAR.

Festival in Lincoln Hall, Washington, in Aid of the Orphans' Home—Address by the Vice-President of the United States.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—Vice-President COLFAX presided at the grand musical entertainment at Lincoln Hall, to-night, for the benefit of the orphans of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home. He delivered the following address:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: I came hither to unite with the guardians of the Grand Army of the Republic to speak briefly to you in behalf of their beneficent endeavor to add to the future comforts of the orphans of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home. No time could be more fitting than this holiday week, interwoven between the old year and the new. The double Christmas has just passed, the double New-Year's is at hand, and in this week of joyous festivity, when happiness fills the hearts of millions, from the gray-haired sire to the infant son, it is well that you remember the orphans and seek to gladden their hearts too, but more than all other orphans have these children of the nation the right to grateful and affectionate remembrance. The war which darkened our land for so many years will long be remembered. Our pension roll of $20,000,000 per year, for disabled heroes, and soldiers' and sailors' widows, keeps it vividly in our mind. Our national asylums, the doors of which stand open to welcome thousands to permanent refuge from the adversities of life, are among its mementoes. Our national cemeteries, our crowded grave-yards, and the weary circuit, and the empty sleeve, all remind us of that saddening struggle, but nearest of all to our hearts to-night, because more helpless and dependent, are the orphans of the war. We are proud of our country, and prouder of our title of American citizens. We deem it an inestimable privilege to live in this heaven-favored land, but the fathers of the orphans, who sleep the sleep that knows no waking till the resurrection morn, not only lived for this country, but they died for it. They were our brothers, our friends, our neighbors. In the days when peace reigned, we met them in our streets, in stores and workshops, on their farms and in the forests, but the hour of national peril came, and these quiet, peace-loving citizens were transformed into heroes. They rose from the sphere of the citizen to the plane of the patriot, and armed with the courage of the warrior. But they were not only patriotic and brave and daring, they were martyrs also. The martyrs of religion gave their lives for a principle; these martyrs of patriotism gave their lives for an idea. It was the grand idea of American nationality that inspired to the sacrifice and transformed from peaceful citizens into patriotic heroes. It was to save the dear old flag from dishonor and the nation they loved from destruction that they gave their lives. Many live to see the victory won for which they had periled so much, but many of them have passed away before the hour of triumph—in the darkness of the night, before the bright rays of the morning of national salvation. Some sleep tonight near the friends they loved while living; but many returned not, living nor dead. Lying to-night in distant cemeteries, or sadder still, all have over them the sometimes marked "unknown." We cannot add the glory, or history, or renown, of these, whose deaths saved for us our country; but we can the most fitly honor those who gave up home, and happiness, and life for us, by caring tenderly and affectionate for those they left behind. Many of you haveately comfortable, and even palatial mansions. These children, orphaned by war, have nowhere to lay their heads except the home which benevolence has given them. Many of you are blessed in "basket and in store." They have no possessions they can call their own. Many of you enjoy the delightful companionship of home, where that happy trinity of father, mother and children fill it with joy from the hearth stone to the roof tree. But this is children whose fathers have sacrificed as much for you and me. I rejoice, therefore, that the Grand Army of the Republic have opened this door of opportunity for your benefactions. I rejoice that our national band, whose melodies are so often heard at the Executive Mansion, and the sweet singers—not of Israel, but of Washington—have lent their aid to this demonstration. I rejoice that you have come here from your holiday joys, to make a happy day for those whose fathers were, but are not. You will be repaid in that finer joy which God always gives to those who make others happier. If you needed more remember that striking epitome of the meek St. James, when he gave as the first definition of a religion pure and undefiled, to visit the widow and the fatherless in their affliction. And remember, also, that striking prediction of the last words which fell from the lips of Christ, when he asked not in regard to creed or sect, but whether they had fed the hungering and clothed the naked and cared for the friendless, and declared that those who had thus ministered to the children of misfortune had ministered unto Him. I welcome you, therefore, in this labor of love in which you have shown your interest. In this work you can gain a treasure that moth and rust cannot corrupt; an investment whose dividends are beyond all peradventure. A happy, joyous welcome to you one and all.

Prosecution of a Collector's Sureties.

Among the suits which have been instituted in the District Court by Assistant United States District-Attorney EMMERSON, is one against the sureties on the bond given by Ex-Collector MORGAN L. HARRIS, for the faithful performance of his duties while Collector of the Eighth District. It is claimed that the Government has lost about $1,000,000 on account of Mr. HARRIS having accepted "straw" bondsmen for the release of seized whisky and distillery and rectifying establishment property.

Mr. HARRIS' bond was given for over $100,000. The sureties are Messrs. A. A. LOW, Cyrus W. Crosswell, Stephen P. Russell, Andrew Mills and Charles Devlin. Thomas Clinton, James Ramsden, John Morgan and Thomas Matthews are some of the alleged "straw" bondsmen accepted by the Ex-Collector.

CHRISTIAN MORAL SCIENCE.

Meeting of the American Association at Plymouth Church, Brooklyn—Addresses by Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, Rev. Mr. Pentecost and Others.

A public meeting of the American Christian Moral Science Association was held in Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, last evening. A very good audience was gathered in the church, but not at all so numerous as is wont to gather there on the Sabbath. Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER at first presided, made the opening prayer and address, and then retired to meet other engagements, and handed the Chairmanship over to Rev. Mr. PENTECOST. There were present on the platform, also, Rev. Wm. McAlister, of New-York; Rev. Mr. PIKE and Rev. Dr. CATHER.

Mr. BEECHER in his address uttered many things that he had previously said at the Astor House breakfast. There are two objects he said contemplated by this Association—systematic beneficence and the education that ought to accompany it; and to produce the influence by which Christian men and Christian churches may be brought into closer sympathy and harmony of action with each other. In the lower states of development denominational distinctions were as necessary as geographical boundaries, but as we develop higher we see that there is something better and grander before us, viz., a Christian unity. It has been the objection of Christians everywhere for years past to bring each other to a condition of intellectual and moral unity, but it never has been and never can be done practically. Astronomers say that no two men looking at the same star can see it at the same time. The retina of the eye is so peculiar that the object is impressed upon some much more slowly than upon others. There is, therefore, among astronomers what is known as personal equation, by which each is enabled to identify the object which his brother has seen and described. Can't we, he asked, obtain such Christian identity by a similar rule of allowance and allowance for each others' foibles? Men who are legally conscientious will see that the Bible is more strict on the side of beneficence than of mercy, while another will scoff otherwise. Let them fight and they produce sects, but love will unite them. The medium course is the best. Let both sides be brought up together complete and harmonious. The news of all differing men bring out the large-proportioned and varied truth of God. And He is taking men in every Church and men outside of every Church to develop and proclaim his truth. Men may differ in details, but all unite in Jesus Christ, the Interpreter of God. Look at our Church organizations. Have we unity? Precious unity that is! There is only one Church, but it exists in ten forms, and each is positive that his is the Church. Though he recognized the necessity for divisions in the Christian Church, still God is showing his people that there is something higher, and He is gradually leading them into that better way. The Church is united when love makes Summer in the soul, and when every Church recognizes in the unity of the spirit its sister Churches. Nobody can tell what shall be the external form of the Church of the future. Let it alone and it will assume its own form. He believed that the same God who is leading Protestants is also leading Catholics, and there will spring up in Europe, some day, a Reformed Catholic Church, and though we may not live to see it, the day will come when we shall all speak one language of love. Our children will live to see the day when the power of a common baptism of the Holy Ghost will bring together the Christians and make them one in Christ Jesus. For twenty years in this place (Plymouth pulpit) he had preached these things, and he believed that the men and women of the Church were ripe for the work of this Association, and for that higher realm above of unity in Christian love. There is but one Church, and Rome claims to be that one. But the Greek lays equal claim to visible unity. Rome is united only when she is fighting against Protestants, but when she is at peace with us her people are fighting among themselves, as if they were Protestants. [Laughter.] Witness the Vatican Council. Doubtless some of its members now declaring that it was not a Council, and that it had no authority or power to declare the Pope infallible, which, after all, only means that when he hits right he hits right, and when he don't he don't. [Laughter.] And I think, said Mr. BEECHER, in this case I am myself infallible. This sort of Christian unity is like those large boarding-houses of New-York, where fifty families are gathered under one roof, but they fight with each other like cats and dogs. Juxtaposition does not make unity. Men have tried to unite by organizations, but after 3,000 years' trial this has failed. Other means have been tried also and failed, and God has shown us by those failures that we can't unite by methods of policy or systems of organization. When he (BEECHER) was a young minister in the West his Methodist, Baptist and Episcopal brethren united with him—he being a Calvinistic Presbyterian, which fact might be news to some of his hearers—in promoting a glorious revival. They were all so zealous for the salvation of souls and the glory of Christ's Kingdom that they forgot for the time their denominational distinctions. But when they came to divide the chickens they hatched them their denominationalism cropped out, and in proportion as it did the revival went down. He blessed God for all that is done to snatch men from the world, and to lead them to God.

Mr. PENTECOST then took the chair, and, in giving a brief exposition of the principles and aims of the Moral Science Association, said there were two points that needed to be taken hold of to explain the whole matter. First, the promotion of Christian moral science, and second, how shall its work be accomplished? Not as we stand relating to each other, denominationally. It would be just as absurd to do so as to attempt to reduce Paris by leaving the Prussian division commanders to act independently of each other. We must have a union of some sort. Mr. PENTECOST then referred to efforts that had been made heretofore to unite Christians by compelling them to ignore their denominational distinctions, all of which had failed. He next pointed out some of the different forms of unity which are not desired nor sought after, such as that of Roman Catholicism, where men can think only as the Church allows. Protestants revolt at such a unity. They would not have it if it was offered to-morrow. What we want is unity of heart. All Christians are united as they touch Christ. But even with union of spirit and union of faith we cannot accomplish anything. There must be an association of some sort in which we can all unite as fellow churchmen, because fellow-christians in laboring for the spread of the Gospel of Christ. Sectarianism is the arrogating to ourselves of all the truth of God. This Association strikes at the root of that fatal mistake and opens up a way for each to stand on a common platform and recognize every other denomination. Mr. PENTECOST then briefly detailed how, from being an Episcopalian, he became a Baptist—not, as he said, from any love of the Baptist doctrine, but by the leading of God's Spirit providentially with him, and he presumed it was so also with many others of his brethren. But while he loved the good old Church of his childhood and youth, he did not believe he could have been half as successful in winning souls to Christ as a farmer on the Episcopal Church as he has been with his Baptist sling and stone. He thought a strict Baptist was ready to give the hand of catholic churchmanship to every converted man and woman of every Church, and he hailed with joy the day that seems to be dawning upon us. He had stepped outside of his Baptist door and united with them, but he must not be clubbed for being a Baptist.

Rev. Mr. PIKE and Dr. CATHER also made addresses, after which votes of thanks to the presiding officers were passed, and the meeting adjourned.

The Elevated Railway—Presentment by the Grand Jury.

Among the indictments handed in by the Grand Jury in the Court of Oyer and Terminer yesterday, was the following presentment by the Grand Jury against the Greenwich-street Elevated Railroad:

City and County of New-York, ss.: The jurors of the People of the State of New-York, on and for the body of the City and County of New-York upon their oath present:

That the West Side and Yonkers Patent Railway Company, a corporation existing to be incorporated by the provisions of chapter 460 of the laws of 1867 of the state of New-York, on the 1st day of October, in the year of our Lord, 1870, and on divers other days and times between that day and the day of the taking of this inquisition, at the City and County aforesaid, with force and arms, unlawfully, willfully, dangerously, impertinently and maliciously located and erected in the City of New-York—to wit, over and upon the public sidewalks in certain public streets thereof, known as Greenwich-street and Ninth-avenue, and which streets were then and there and are constantly used by an aggregate number of the citizens of the city aforesaid—500 posts, 1,000 iron and wooden rails, and then and there unlawfully, willfully and dangerously and maliciously maintained the said structure of iron posts and wooden rails for the pretended purposes of a railroad for the pretended transit over said posts and on such rails of cars then and there expected to contain men, women and children as passengers, and that they the said the West Side and Yonkers Patent Railway Company then and there unlawfully, willfully, dangerously and maliciously continued to maintain said posts and said railroad structures in form and manner, so that the public sidewalks of the public streets aforesaid were and are obstructed, and rendered inconvenient in public use, and thereby the free passage of said pedestrians in along upon and across said sidewalks was and is greatly impeded, and the public highway thereby blockaded, and the personal safety and security of the bodies and limbs of persons walking and of horses being driven near said streets, both beside them and under said structures of railway were then and there previously endangered and hazarded and placed in jeopardy, and that they the said the West Side and Yonkers Patent Railway Company then and there, unlawfully, dangerously and maliciously permitted and suffered, and do still unlawfully, willfully, and dangerously permit and suffer the said structure so by them placed and built as aforesaid, to remain on the public highways aforesaid, in an unsafe condition, and encumbering to the Public Thoroughfare, and prevent the free and peaceful passage of the public along the said streets, and to injure the health of the inhabitants of the City of New-York, and to endanger the lives of persons passing and repassing the said streets in which and over which said structure is situated and erected as aforesaid, as well as unpleasant and hazardous, by reason of the imperfect construction, the passengers in going and laboring in through and along the aforesaid public streets, avenues and highways, to the evil example of all others in like case offending, and against the peace of the people of the State of New-York and their dignity.

A. B. GARVIN, District-Attorney.

The Court then adjourned to 10½ A. M. today.

THE CRISPINS' STRIKE.

Meeting at Cooper Institute—The Speeches—The Strike from the Crispins' Point of View.

The Crispins held a meeting last evening in the large hall of the Cooper Institute to advocate co-operation and the immediate establishment of co-operative stores, especially among those now on strike. The meeting was very thinly attended, not more than 200 people, some of whom were women, being present.

Mr. MICHAEL FERGUSON was called to the chair, and said that the object of the meeting was to discuss co-operation as the only remedy that could be adopted, under existing circumstances, for strikes and lockouts. Many boot and shoe manufacturers and dealers have banded themselves together for the sole and express purpose of destroying the Crispin organization. What the Crispins had now to do was to form co-operative stores, to make themselves independent of their employers, and enable them to say to the men, "Take back your tools, for we can get along without them."

Mr. NELSON W. YOUNG was then introduced, and said that he came to say a few words to them, in violation of the commands of his physician. The subject of co-operation was engaging the attention of all trade-unions at the present time. Employers were making desperate efforts to break up all trade societies, and it was their duty now to not only defend their rights, but to make themselves independent of all employers. The Board of Boot and Shoe Dealers think that workmen have no right to band themselves together for mutual benefit and protection, while at the same time they were themselves forming a powerful and crushing combination to protect their interests and annihilate all trade-unions, which they claim to regard as inimical to their prosperity in business. But the trades-unionists were determined to submit to no wrong, to firmly defend their rights by all fair and legal means. All classes have their societies, the lawyers, the clergymen, the landlords and others, and why should not the mechanics and laboring men? He denied that the Crispins are on strike; they are locked out. It was a bold stroke of policy on the part of the manufacturers and the Board of Boot and Shoe Dealers, who hoped to triumph in the Crispins' weakness and prosper in their distress. But they will soon find how much they were mistaken. The trades-unions of New-York had responded to the call of the Crispins with a spontaneous generosity that assured them full sympathy and liberal support. Things are not now as they were twenty years ago. Each men were beginning to look with interest to the well-being of the mechanics and laboring classes. The munificent donations which prominent men are making to the poor of their districts are sufficient proof of this. The speaker then referred to the coal-miners' strike in Pennsylvania, which he characterized as a scheme of the employers to raise the price of coal, and then went on to point out the benefits accruing from co-operation. A few days ago a Crispin told him that twelve months ago he and two others started a small bootand shoe co-operative store, with a capital of $600, and during the year they realized a profit of $7,000. It was not for the reduction of prices that the blow was struck against the Crispins, but for the destruction of the organization, in the hope that, as it was the largest and centre of all the other trades-unions, the entire fabric of trades-unionism would tumble down with it. A Committee of Arbitration was appointed by the working Men's unions to arrange with the boot and shoe manufacturers, but was told they could not be heard, that the Crispins would have to submit to a reduction. There are firms in the city inclined to pay a fair price for work, and these are threatened with ruin if they do not reduce the prices and join the ring. In conclusion he counseled them to be calm in their deliberations, to establish co-operative stores and not be discouraged by the strong efforts now being made to crush them.

A Mr. EGAN was the next speaker. He said he was not a trades-unionist, because he was was not a mechanic, or working man; but he would support the Crispins, and all other trades-unionists in their battle against the injustice of rich monopolies. As a proof of his sincerity he placed a check for $50 and said he would give that sum every week while the "lock-out" lasted.

Mr. MURPHY said the only antidote for strikes and "lock-outs" is co-operation.

Mr. MASTERSON said it was consoling to the Crispins to see that they had the sympathy and support of the trades-unionists of New-York.

A series of resolutions were read and adopted, pledging the meeting to support and use every endeavor to sustain the enterprise (co-operation) which the Crispins are about inaugurating, believing that it will tend to ameliorate their condition, and be to the interest of the community at large. A drunken fellow on the platform, during Mr. YOUNG's speech, called for three cheers for WILLIAM M. TWEED, which was but feebly responded to by a couple of wheezy voices.

FIRE DEPARTMENT LYCEUM.

The Library and Collection at Curiosities Thrown Open as Firemen's Hall—Address of Judge Daly.

There was a very interesting meeting held last evening, under the auspices of the Board of Fire Commissioners, and the Trustees of the Library, upon the occasion of the opening of the Lyceum and Library connected with the Department, at its head-quarters, No. 127 Mercer-street. Hon. CHAS. P. DALY, LL.D., delivered an address upon the origin and history of the Fire Department of the City of New-York. The speaker commenced by a brief review of the condition of this town when it was known as Manhattan, and when not one fire engine was in existence, and traced in a rapid manner the progress which has been made in that regard within the last 200 years. The early history of the City, the manners and customs of the inhabitants, and the mode of building and protecting homes, were referred to in this connection. Our Dutch ancestors did not, the speaker said, readily adopt improvements or make changes, and hence it was that for so many years the old system of extinguishing fires by means of pails and buckets hauded along the lines of men and women placed in double rows between the house and the place of conflagration. It was true that sometimes they used ladders, but they were often of very imperfect construction. In tracing the records in reference to disastrous fires which have occurred in this City, the Judge said that all things considered, no city in the world had suffered so extensively as this, except the City of Constantinople. The great conflagrations of 1776, 1804, 1811, 1835 and 1845, were alluded to, and the number of buildings reported to have been burned stated. In conclusion, the energy and activity of the members of the Fire Department, as at present organized, were commended, and especially was the steam engine, and its mode of locomotion from one point of the city to another by means of horse-power applauded. After Judge DALY concluded Mr. BAILEY MYERS, one of the members of the Board, presented gold medals to BENJAMIN A. GAGAL, foreman of Engine Company No. 26, and MINTHORNE D. TOMPKINS, Assistant Foreman of Hook and Ladder Company No. 13, for meritorious services in saving life.

The Lyceum Rooms, which have been opened for the benefit of the members of the Department, are quite pleasant, spacious and well furnished. The books composing the library amount to several thousands of valuable, interesting and well-selected works. The museum of curiosities contains many rare old relics of the old fire Department. All these were fully and exclusively described in the TIMES several weeks ago.

A Wife Charged with Perjury by Her Husband.

MANUEL TEGGA DE LA VEGA, a Cuban, charged his wife, JULIA, with perjury before Commissioner OSBORN yesterday. According to his statement, his wife, after marrying him, had committed perjury by swearing that she was unmarried in order to obtain pension money allowed her on account of a soldier named LEHNHARDT, her former husband, who was killed during the war. The accused said that VEGA had persuaded her to draw the pension after marrying him, and had made oath himself that she was not married. It transpired that the complaint was instigated by jealousy against the woman on the part of her husband, who charges her with infidelity. An examination will be held in the case today.

The Postponement of a Murder Trial.

In the Court of Oyer and Terminer, yesterday, Judge BARNARD presiding, no trials took place, owing to the absence of material witnesses. Among those postponed was the trial of JOHN THOMAS, a colored man, charged with the murder of another colored man named WALTER JOHNSON, in Broome-street, on the night of Commodore VANDERBILT's funeral. The prisoner's counsel, Messrs. JOSH A. GOODLETT and J. J. ROCHE, were present in Court, and announced their readiness to proceed with the trial, but owing to the absence of a number of the chief witnesses, including Dr. SMITH, the District-Attorney did not deem it safe to go to trial. The trial was accordingly postponed until to-morrow, with the case of JOHN WILSON, who pleaded guilty of an attempt at grand larceny, the Court sentenced to imprisonment, owing to circumstances showing doubt as to the criminal intent of the

The Grand Jury brought in a number of indictments against parties for minor offences, to which they pleaded not guilty, and were remanded for trial.

Elopement Extraordinary—The Wife of a Wealthy Editor Runs Away with a Boy.

At Locust Grove, a settlement in Newtown, Queens County, the house of Mr. GROFF, an editor of a tobacco journal, and seemingly well to do, was, a few days since, found open and the furniture, household utensils and valuables, together with the family, among the missing. It seems that about two months since Mr. GROFF started on a commercial trip to Europe, and took with him his little daughter, a child of ten years of age, leaving Mrs. GROFF, a handsome and engaging woman of thirty-five years of age, to await his return, which is expected soon. All the luxuries that a fond and doting husband could lavish upon his wife—a handsome carriage, horses, splendid furniture, a house fitted up with all the modern improvements, books, paintings, &c.—were here, together with an interesting little daughter, the pride of the household. Cash in bank, ample for every exigency, was left to the disposal of the wife. Hardly had Mr. GROFF got beyond the shores of the country on his outward-bound trip, before a visitor made his appearance in the person of a young, sleek-looking man, with down on his upper lip, who attentions to the wife and child soon began to attract notice. This personage was a Mr. LATTING, not yet twenty-one years of age. It is reported that he has been seen coming from the house late at night, and instead of making his exit from the natural opening, leaping out of a bedroom window. Sunday night furniture began to be removed, and before morning not a vestige appeared. The horses were found in a stable at Hunter's Point, where the couple had left them after taking the ferry-boat for New-York. The whereabouts of the parties are not now known. A week or two since Mrs. GROFF commenced to make up extra dresses, and the supposition is that they left for Europe.

FRANK LESLIE'S ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPER for this week, contains a seasonably humorous picture entitled, "Home Late." Mr. Wiggins has been Christmassing, and comes back to his stern and angry better half, in a condition of half happiness and half dismay, at a fearful hour in the morning. The uncomprehending look of the long-waiting wife, as she holds the tell-tale watch in her hand, is in fine contrast to the vacant expression of the doomed "Caudle." The paper in other respects is up to its usual high mark, and, in addition, presents to its readers this week a most acceptable picture of the study of CHARLES DICKENS, in which, illustrative title of "The Empty Chair," Mrs. HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD contributes an interesting paper on Capt. Kidd, the famous pirate.—Weekly Review.

Suicide of a Member of the Mississippi Legislature.

From the Jackson (Miss.) Clarion, Dec. 20.

Hon. A. S. WOOD, member of the Legislature from Yazoo County, and who has been a patient for several months in the Lunatic Asylum, committed suicide on Sunday evening last about 8 o'clock, by hanging himself from an iron bar of his room window. He employed for the purpose a long towel, such as is used on rollers, one end of which he fastened to the bar, and more a loop of the other end, placed it around his neck. His head, when found, rested against the window sill, the distance from which to the floor of the room being about three feet. He evidently threw the full weight of his body on the towel in a desperate resolve to make the work quick and effectual. He had been seen in passage about fifteen minutes previous, and was found dead by one of the attendants who had entered the room with medicine. The deceased was a native of Vermont, and thirty-six years of age. He was committed to the Asylum soon after the adjournment of the Legislature; had frequently applied for a razor, and on occasion was detected putting a carving-knife in his pocket while at table. The deceased had informed the Superintendent that he had a fit of insanity about fifteen years ago, and that the disease was hereditary.

Important Treasury Suits in New-Orleans.

From the New-Orleans Picayune, Dec. 21.

We learn that Special Treasury Agent KINSELLA has recently turned over to the District-Attorney, for suit, nineteen export bonds given by various parties here for exportation of large quantities of whisky and tobacco to Matamoras and Belize, in 1867. The amount involved is about $200,000. These cases have been hanging fire for a long time, owing to the delay necessarily incurred in getting at the facts and in collecting evidence of fraud. The theory is that nearly all these bonds were canceled upon fraudulent consular certificates, and the method of procedure, if that theory be correct, is this:

The goods being in internal revenue bonded warehouse, are subject to the tax, but to avoid its payment the parties interested go to the Custom-house and execute export bonds to have them sent beyond the limits of the United States. The Collector thereupon gives an order to an inspector to see these goods laden on board of the vessel or vessels, and the inspector makes his return, which is duly filed. The export bonds are then canceled on the production of a landing certificate verified by the Consul at the port of destination. Mr. KINSELLA has, if we mistake not, collected evidence which will prove some at least of the certificates upon which the bonds were canceled, to have been fraudulent.

A Young Woman Cruelly Deceived and Deserted.

From the London (Ontario) Free Press, Dec. 23.

A story of cruel and heartless villainy comes from Whitby. On Friday last a young married couple took passage at Duffin's Creek for Toronto, on their wedding trip. On the way up, their demonstrations of attachment were very marked and very amusing to the rest of the passengers. Arrived at the Union Station, Toronto, the groom left his bride, and went to get shaved, having $300 of her money in his care. He never returned. The bride waited till her patience was exhausted; and just previous to the departure of the 5 o'clock train east, she discovered she was the victim of him who vowed to love, cherish and protect her. Her cries brought a crowd around, to whom she told her sorrowful tale. She was left without a cent of money, and no way of getting home. A gentleman of Whitby paid her fare to Duffin's Creek. The young lady, whose name we forbear to publish, is highly respectable, her father being an old and wealthy resident of Pickering.

The Assistant Treasurer announced yesterday, by orders from the Secretary, that the January interest would be paid on and after to-day without rebate on presentation of coupons, or on application at the Registered Interest Department. The amount to be paid is about $3,600,000 in coin, but it is not expected that the payments will be very large each day, as most of the bonds are held by banking corporations. Holders of small amounts will do well to present their coupons for payment before the 1st proximo, as after that time the crowd may be so large as to be inconvenient.

LONG ISLAND.

A few days since, while crossing Main-street, opposite ELLIOT'S store, Gen. JAS. BROWN, an aged and infirm citizen of Flushing, was run over and badly injured by a horse driven by HENRY MYERS. Mr. BROWN endeavored to avoid a collision by retracing his steps, but MYERS seemed to rein his horse directly for him without abating his speed. Mr. BROWN was knocked down and trampled upon by the horse, badly bruising his legs and thighs in such a manner that he has no use of them, and today his condition is most pitiable. It is a wonder that accidents of this kind are not occurring daily, as some drivers of vehicles seem to have no care whatever of human life judging from the rapid rate at which they drive.

The Board of Supervisors of Queens County had their Christmas meeting at the house of their most wealthy member, TOWNSEND D. COX, Esq., of Oyster Bay, at Locust Valley. It is reported that while enjoying the sumptuous repast with Mr. COX, some very important county matters were fixed up, not the least important of which was the new County Court-house question. The Supervisors wisely concluded that no outside political ring shall have anything to do with this matter, which is solely a people's movement, and that, if a Commission is to be appointed to build the Court-house, the proper persons on such Commission are the Supervisors themselves. The location of the Court-house has been practically settled some time, although the formal vote has not been taken.

On Monday afternoon, while the laborers employed on the Hoffman Boulevard were excavating in the ridge of hills, the embankment fell and crushed three men, killing one of them named JAMES MOSES, and fatally injuring the other two. Yesterday afternoon Coroner HENDRICKSON held an inquest, and the jury found that Moses came to his death by accidental means.

The new church edifice of the Methodist Episcopal Church, River Head, is completed. The building was erected under the supervision of TAPEN REVE, architect, and Mr. WICKES CORWIN, who had charge of the carpenter work. The contractors are TERRY & WELLS. The building is 50 by 70 feet, with a finely-finished front, containing a large ornamental window. Altogether, the building is one of the finest, if not the finest edifice belonging to the denomination outside of Brooklyn. A lower eighty feet high surmounts the edifice, containing a bell weighing 1,200 pounds. Rev. Mr. HADLEY, the pastor of the church, was the projector of the enterprise.

At present there are eight vessels, ranging from 500 to 800 tons each, in course of construction in the ship-yards of Port Jefferson, besides several more which are on the railways undergoing repairs. During the absence of WILLIAM CORNELL and family, of Mamaroneck, from home on Monday afternoon, a couple of tramps—a man and a woman—called at his residence, to beg, and, not being relieved immediately, they followed the housekeeper inside, and ordered them off the premises for some time. Shortly after their departure a fire broke out in the barn, which, together with two horses, a number of carriages, wagons, sets of harness, a quantity of hay and some fowls were totally consumed. Loss, about $5,000. The suspected parties were arrested yesterday and held for examination.

NEW-JERSEY.

On Saturday night two men by the names of SCHUYLER and MANDEVILLE returned home from some festivity near Pompton Plains, Morris County, and on account of the lateness of the hour went to bed in a workshop in the barn. SCHUYLER had been smoking, and throwing his cigar on the barn floor it set fire to the hay. SCHUYLER succeeded in escaping, but MANDEVILLE became suffocated with the smoke, and before he could be rescued was burned to death.

In the Hudson County Court of Quarter Sessions, yesterday, MICHAEL DELANEY was found guilty of passing counterfeit bills on the West Winfield Bank, New-York. He was sentenced to the Penitentiary for six months. JOSEPH WILLIAMS, found guilty of stealing money from his parents, was sent to a Catholic reformatory institution in New-York.

Col. VAN BUREN, of Morristown, is spending the Winter in New-York, and BENJAMIN MAINS has charge of the Colonel's farm in the country. A valuable dog recently sent from New-York to the farm as a watch-dog, ran mad on Monday, and bit two little children of Mr. MAINS, several cattle, and a valuable horse.

While a number of workmen were engaged in excavating a cellar on Ocean-avenue, Bergen, yesterday afternoon, the bank caved in, burying one of the men, named DUFFY. He was extricated as soon as possible, but life was extinct. The soil was clay, and he must have been almost instantly suffocated.

MORE CHRISTMAS.

Observances at St. John's Chapel.

The distribution of presents to the children of the Sunday-school belonging to St. John's Chapel in Varick-street, took place yesterday before a large audience, composed principally of the parents and guardians of the little ones. The children assembled in the chapel at 2 o'clock, all dressed in their best clothing, and presented a very neat appearance. They were happy at the sight of the imitation of a Christmas tree, in front of the pulpit, loaded with gifts consisting for the most part of dolls and other toys and cornucopias filled with candies and bags of fruit. After considerable difficulty order was restored among the assemblage, and then the organ was heard pealing forth the notes of the Processional Hymn, "Hark! the herald angels sing."

The services for the day were conducted by the pastor, J. W. WESTON, D. D. These included the "Cantate Domino," which was sung by the choir and children in a very effective manner. The carol "When Christ was born of Mary free" was then sung by the children, and the creed was recited. This was followed by the carol "Happy, holy Christmas morn!"

An address was then delivered by Rev. Dr. DIX, who complimented the scholars and teachers for the excellent condition of the school, and referred to the festival (St. John's Day) they had assembled to celebrate. Rev. Dr. WESTON then made a few remarks, introducing the festivities of the occasion, and remarking upon the beauty and extent of the presents to be given the children. Another carol was then sung, the benediction pronounced, and the presents were then distributed to the throng of happy children.

Church of the Stranger.

At the Church of the Stranger, No. 4 Winthrop-place, a festival was held, yesterday afternoon, between 4 and 8 o'clock. The room was thronged with the Sunday-school children attached to the parish and their friends, and it was difficult to decide which were the happiest—the donors or the recipients of the generous and pleasant entertainment.

The school—like the church—is rather peculiar in its undenominational but vigorous enterprise. The pastor, Rev. Dr. DEMING, is as active among the children as he is among their elders, and his presence and converse is as greatly prized as any pleasure that can be offered. The school, as well as the church, is in a most flourishing condition, as was amply evinced by the successful proceedings on this interesting occasion.

St. George's Chapel.

Two hundred children of the infant classes of St. George's Sunday-school, held their festival in the chapel yesterday morning. A beautiful Christmas tree was placed against the wall, and from its branches depended quantities of dolls, toys, and attractive gifts of various kinds. This was a most brilliant spectacle, but not so much so as the bright eyes and shining faces of the eager and expectant little ones. After listening to cheery addresses, and "singing sweet songs of Zion," the tree was denuded of its clustering treasures, which were distributed among all. A happier group could scarcely be pictured.

Home of the Friendless.

Last evening was one of the most joyous occasions ever known in the "Home of the Friendless," in Thirtieth-street, near Fourth-avenue. The inmates, to the number of 200, assembled "at early candle-light" in the chapel, where interesting addresses were delivered, and jubilant vocal music indulged in. The patrons and friends of the institution had prepared an ample supply of Christmas presents, including toys, confectionery, fruit, &c., which were displayed to the impatient gaze of the youngsters throughout the preliminary exercises. Afterward these were given out, amid the enthusiastic plaudits of the little folks, and the scarcely less delight of the elder spectators.

Entertainment to the Street Boys.

An enthusiastic and delightful assemblage of newsboys, boot-blacks and nondescripts met last night, at the Rivington-street Lodging-house, to witness an exhibition of the photographic views of the Arctic regions, taken on the exhibition of the celebrated Dr. HAYES and Mr. BRADFORD, the artist. By means of a powerful calcium light, views were exhibited of all the points of interest made memorable by FRANKLIN, KANE, HAYES and other Arctic explorers. Excellent photographs also were shown of Esquimaux, great ice-bergs, glaciers, and other interesting subjects. Each view, as it appeared, was graphically explained by Mr. BRADFORD, and elicited the greatest interest and admiration among the boys. A number of prominent citizens were present, who expressed their admiration of Mr. BRADFORD'S entertainment and joined the boys in according him a hearty vote of thanks; and also to Mr. HENRY E. HAVEMEYER, through whose kindness the entertainment was secured.
